CARNERA DEFEATS LOUGHRAN ON DECISION

Sons of G.O.P. Chiefs Shown As Lobbyists In Air Probe

Young Fess, Philp Aids of N. A. T.; Kahn Held W. A. E. Job.

Forced W. A. E. to Slow Service, Witness Tells Query.

By Martha Dalrymple.

The sons of three more prominent Republicans were drawn into the air-mail contract investigation yesterday.

Lehr Fess, son of the Republican Senator from Ohio; Julius Kahn, son of Representative Florence Kahn (Republican), California, and William H. Philp, son of John W. Philp, former Fourth Assistant Postmaster General in the Hoover Administration, were those who joined the ranks with Herbert Hoover, jr., and Ernest W. Smoot, son of the former Senator from Utah.

Young Kahn did political work in Washington for Western Air Express, while Fess and Philip both represented National Air Transport at various operators' meetings in the Postoffice Department during 1930, the Senate Mail Contract Investigating Committee learned.

Harris M. Hanshue, president of Western Air Express, who held the stand most of the day, also took occasion to elaborate on the work that young Smoot did for him. On Wednesday Smoot himself testified that he had drawn more than $20,000 in salaries from outside companies while he was clerk of his father's Senate Finance Committee.

"Sold" Influence Idea.

Smoot "sold" the company the idea that he could use his influence with Comptroller General in hastening a decision favorable to Western Air Express, said Hanshue.

"The main idea was to get this favorable decision, wasn't it?" asked Senator Black (Democrat), Alabama, chairman of the committee.

"Well, yes, to expedite it. I don't think anybody would have a lot of influence with the Comptroller General," replied Hanshue.

Young Hoover, the son of the former President, has been previously identified as a radio engineer for Western Air Express, who was in Washington for a short period during the time the operators were holding their conferences with postoffice officials in 1930.

Neither the nature of the work young Fess and Philp performed for N. A. T., nor the salaries they received was revealed. Senator Fess at the time was chairman of the Republican National committee.

A letter written by Hanshue to G. S. Childs, of the Pitcairn Aviation Corporation, about the possi-

Hutton Divorced From Evangelist

Aimee Drops Suit, Trial Is Quiet.

Los Angeles, March 1 (U.P.).—David L. Hutton today won a divorce from Aimee Semple McPherson, the woman evangelist, on charges of mental cruelty.

In contrast to prospective legal fireworks which developed when Hutton and Mrs. McPherson brought opposing suits for divorce, the proceedings were quiet. The evangelist withdrew her suit yesterday.

Italian Retains Title Before 10,000 Fans

Crowd Boos Champion as He Mauls Challenger in Early Rounds.

Madison Square Gardeen Stadium, Miami, Fla., March 1 (AP).—Primo Carnera retained his heavyweight championship of the world tonight by outpointing Tommy Loughran, Philadelphia challenger, in their 15-round bout.

An estimated attendance of only 10,000 fans saw the bout, which drew a gate of approximately $40,000.

A heavy shower of rain hit the arena tonight after three preliminaries had been fought and promoters immediately called the principals into the ring for the main bout.

The ringside was tossed into some turmoil and the crowd thoroughly drenched by a sudden shower after the third preliminary had been completed. It didn't last long, but it gave everybody the jitters and the promoters immediately called the main bout only to change their mind as the rain stopped and put on another short preliminary.

Primo 5-1 Favorite.

With every physical advantage in his favor, Carnera entered the ring a 5-to-1 favorite. He outweighed his challenger 86 pounds, had a foot advantage in reach and 6 inches in height. The betting was 2 to 1 that

Austrian Army Recruits Gain; Fear New War

Socialist Organ Predicts Victory; Anti-American Drive Rumored.

(Copyright, 1934, Associated Press.)

Vienna, March 1.—Recruiting for the Austrian army and its allied Heimwehr corps spurted today as a Socialist official newspaper urged party members to be ready "for a resumption of our fight" against the government.

Chancellor Dollfuss has conquered, but "opportunities for a resumption of our fight and for our victory will come," asserted the organ, published in Czechoslovakia and distributed here by government mailmen.

At least 110,000 were under arms today, ready for any contingency, and their numbers increased continuously in response to government appeals at the height of the recent Socialist uprising and because of fearsome rumors of many hues.

Anti-American Report.

These reports, all of which were denied, included one that mob violence was brewing against Americans here, that an attempt was made on the life of the chancellor, and that Nazis were considering a coup.

Meanwhile, it was officially announced that the enrollment of all Austrian youngsters for "practical patriotic training" will begin shortly, and important changes in the personnel of the Austrian government were considered likely as a result of conferences scheduled tomorrow.

More than 80,000 boys and girls between 14 and 18 in Vienna alone will be organized for instruction in drill calculated to imbue them with a Fascist patriotic spirit. It was expected the new youth army will have a form similar to that of the Italian Ballila.

Cabinet members and all provincial leaders in Dollfuss' fatherland front will meet in separate sessions tomorrow.

Leaders of the Catholic storm troops, who joined the fatherland front months ago and named Dollfuss their supreme commander, have engaged in conferences the past two days.

Tomorrow's fatherland front session is expected to result in a closer union of all armed elements in that

Morgenthau Asks Money Law Delay

Urges Congress to Give More Time for Gold Experiment.

By Robert C. Albright.

Congress yesterday was advised not to meddle with the Administration's monetary stabilization experiment while rising gold and farm commodity prices indicate "it is working pretty well."

The advice was proffered by Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., appearing before a House banking subcommittee on the Goldsborough bill to establish a permanent Federal monetary authority.

Candidly conceding the money program still in the "experimental" stage, Secretary Morgenthau told the committee the Administration is not yet ready for the Goldsborough bill.

Black Follows Lead.

"I hope Congress will give us at least nine months or a year so we may find out a little more about the situation," he said.

"As far as I am concerned, we are on a day-to-day basis. As far as I know, no man can tell us where we will be six months from now or a year from now.

"Whether we are going to continue to be successful, I can only hope. No one knows."

Following the Treasury Secretary on the stand, Gov. Eugene Black of the Federal Reserve Board, likewise withheld indorsement of the Goldsborough money measure. Deviating from the money bill, he urged direct Federal Reserve loans to industry and favored tentative Administration plans for establishment of intermediate credit banks.

Later both Secretary Morgenthau

First Roosevelt Veto Denies Pardon to Deserter-Veteran

(Associated Press.)

Exercising his veto power for the first time, President Roosevelt yesterday returned to Congress without his approval a bill which would have given Beryl H. McHam, an Army deserter, of Sapula, Okla., all the benefits of an honorably discharged soldier.

The President transmitted with his brief message a report from Secretary of War Dern recommending disapproval on the grounds that McHam, who was cited for bravery in action in France, had deserted in 1922 after he had been allowed to reenlist to wipe out a dishonorable discharge.

The Senate Military Committee report recommending passage of the bill said McHam served with distinction with Company C in both the Twenty-sixth and Eighth Infantry Regiments, was wounded by shrapnel, severaly burned with gas, and was cited for bravery.

But on September 30, 1919, McHam, in company with two other soldiers, the report added, "went to a cabaret in Coblentz, Germany, and drank too much intoxicating liquor," and while returning to barracks struck Privates George Greenwald and Lester Gardner "on the body with his fists."

McHam was sentenced to five years' imprisonment, reduced later to 15 months, which he served in the United States Disciplinary Barracks at Fort Jay, N. Y. He then was dishonorably discharged.

McHam was permitted to reenlist March 6, 1922. He deserted September 1 of that year.

Short Sellers In Air Stocks To Be Listed

Whitney to Give Names Monday to Senate Investigators.

Recalls Big Bear Sales Before Cancellation Broke Market.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Names of persons engaged in the short selling of six aviation stocks between January 26 and February 9, the day the air-mail contracts were canceled, yesterday were demanded of the New York Stock Exchange by the Senate Banking and Currency Committee.

Richard Whitney, president of the exchange, told the committee his organization had gathered this information through questionnaires to its members and that he would be glad to deliver it to the Senate on Monday if a subpena were issued. The subpena was served on Mr. Whitney within 15 minutes.

This action, coming precipitately in the midst of the questioning of Mr. Whitney regarding the 1934 security exchange bill, aroused speculation as to identity of the short sellers. Curiosity over the incident was increased by the fact that Senator Hamilton F. Kean (Republican), New Jersey, sponsored the motion demanding the information.

List Asked by Republicans.

In addition to the fact that the demand for exposure of the list of short sellers came from the Republican side of the table, it was regarded as significant that Senator Kean is one of the brokerage fraternity of New York and he never before has been anxious to have Wall street secrets disclosed.

Senator Kean subsequently conteended that the only motive which inspired him was a belief that the information gathered by the exchange would be helpful to the committee.

Unconfirmed reports have been circulated here and in New York to the effect that persons in or close to the Roosevelt Administration sold aviation stocks short, acting on "inside information" that the air-mail contracts would be canceled.

Increase in Shorts Recalled.

The information gathered by the Stock Exchange should indicate the truth or falsity of these reports. Mr. Whitney, after the hearing said the questionnaire asked for all transactions handled by members in the six aviation stocks, with the name of the person for whom the account was handled and whether it was a short or long transaction.

He said he did not recall how many important short sellers there were or whether any orders had been placed from Washington. He said it was his recollection that the short interest in the aviation stocks between the first and end of January increased from 4,600 to 44,000 shares.

Asked why the exchange made the inquiry, which was not a routine

Four Are Killed In Mine Blast

3 Others Badly Burned in Shaft Explosion Near Johnstown.

Johnstown, Pa., March 1 (AP). Four men were killed and three were burned critically today in an explosion at the No. 2 shaft of the Logan Coal Co. at Beaverdale, 4 miles from Johnstown.

The dead were Andy Furnadel, 45; John Bearich, 47, both of Lloydell, and two unidentified men.

The explosion occurred at the head of an air shaft leading to the mine, situated 6 miles from the main entrance.

One hundred other employes of the mine had been forced to leave about noon because moisture in the airshaft had frozen, cutting off the air supply.

Railroaders Halt Strike Over Pay

Washington Conference Had Failed, Said Report.

Kansas City, Mar. 1 (AP).—A strike of Kansas City Southern Railway trainmen and enginemen, scheduled to become effective today, was postponed by an executive order from Cleveland, Ohio, signed by D. B. Robertson, president of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen.

The walkout was ordered Wednesday when it appeared a conference in Washington between C. E. Johnston, president of the Southern, and Joseph B. Eastman, Federal railroad coordinator, would fail.

Later, Johnston announced he had agreed not to put a new wage scale plan into effect until April 1.

Thirsty Jam Rum Stores; Prices Vary

Cheapest Whisky $1.19 a Pint; Costs Under Maryland.

All Stocks Are Scanty; Night Clubs, Hotels Crowded.

By Felix Bruner.

Washington went shopping for its liquor yesterday.

With repeal effective, liquor stores were crowded. Buyers who looked around found a great variation in prices, sometimes as much as $1 and more a bottle. Prices generally were lower than those charged in Maryland stores.

With repeal getting off to a slow start when it actually became effective at midnight Thursday, business picked up yesterday and the cocktail hour found drinking places jammed and stores doing a big business.

Night clubs and restaurants, which did a slow business during the two hours between midnight and 2 a.m. yesterday, were jammed last night as thousands celebrated.

Drunk Arrests Normal.

For the most part, crowds were orderly. Yesterday police made 13 arrests for drunken driving—not an unusual day.

When Government offices closed at 4:30 p. m. crowds flocked to the liquor stores, which had sprung up overnight in the downtown district, and in some places overflowed into the streets.

Stocks were not plentiful. Dealers complained they had been unable to obtain complete assortments of bonded liquors and imported wines, but there was a plentiful supply of blended whisky and domestic wines.

In all, 175 liquor stores had paid their licenses of $750 apiece to sell packaged alcoholic wares of all kinds. Not all of them were ready for business. Customers repeatedly were told that their favorite beverages were not available but would be in a day or two.

Windows Draw Crowds.

Groups gathered around the windows of liquor stores and admired the displays. But when they went inside they found that in many instances the stock in the windows was nearly all there was. In most places the stores were somewhat disorganized, and in many salesmen were forced to explain that they had never heard of the particular brand of liquor or wine wanted.

Drinkers dating back before prohibition found unfamiliar conditions. No drinks could be mixed in view of the customers, and no bottles were on display in the places where drinks were sold. Customers were handed cards with the list of drinks available and given the opportunity to take their choice. They had to trust to the honesty of waiters and bartenders as to what they were getting.

At the Willard, the Mayflower, the Wardman Park and other leading hotels, more than capacity business was being done late in the afternoon. At the Mayflower it was necessary to extend service into the promenade. Other hotels were experiencing the same difficulties. Night clubs reported reservations up to capacity limit.

Nevertheless, there were indications that most Washington drinkers were keeping up their habit of buying liquor and drinking it at home. Public drinking was strange and new to most of the customers.

While most of the buyers were

Filipino Workers Dead Following Feast.

San Luis Obispo, Calif., March 1 (AP).—Their dinner of rejoicing turned into a fatal feast by poisonous mushrooms, nine Filipinos were dead here today and 15 other persons were seriously ill.

The 22 Filipino vegetable pickers and their two white employers ate what they thought were mushrooms. John and Walter Huber, the farmers, were precariously ill in the General Hospital here, together with the thirteen remaining Filipinos.

The feast took place in the rich little valley called Arroyo Grande, 16 miles south of here.

Heavy Earth Shocks Cut Chile Telegraph

Santiago, Chile, March 1 (AP).—A strong earthquake of two and one-half minutes duration shook the region from Concepcion south of Valdivia late this afternoon.

The earthquake started at 5:45 p. m., and it was so severe that all telegraphic communications with the area were cut off. Government officials feared that heavy damage was caused. They were unable to find out immediately whether there were any victims.

Company Union Ban Aim of Wagner's Bill

National Labor Board Puts Weirton Steel Case Up to Cummings.

The National Labor Board handed the Weirton Steel case back to the Department of Justice yesterday as Senator Robert F. Wagner, its chairman, introduced a bill designed to cripple the thousands of company unions which have been set up by employers since passage of the recovery act.

Senator Wagner's bill would prohibit employers from initiating or supervising the formation or operations of any labor organization. It contains a retroactive provision aimed at the employer-supervised company unions already in existence, with a clause stating "any term of a contract or agreement of any kind which conflicts with the provisions of this act is hereby abrogated, and every employer who is a party to such contract or agreement shall immediately so notify his employes by appropriate action." It was generally believed that this abrogation clause would rouse a storm of protest among the industrialists of the Nation.

The Weirton case, on which the Labor Board announced its decision after weeks of delay, was concerned with the refusal of Ernest T. Weir, Pittsburgh steelmaker, to permit the Labor Board to supervise elections held at his plants. Last De-

U. S.-French Debt Accord Held Nearer

Tariff Powers Granted Doumergue Due to Speed Agreement.

Paris, March 1 (AP).—A new era of trade relations between the United States and France, including perhaps a settlement of the troublesome war debts problem, was envisioned by French economists today.

Authority given Premier Gaston Doumergue to change the French tariff structure was called the initial step in eliminating economic barriers to a healthy world trade.

The premier was given the right to manipulate tariffs in bargaining for trade treaties by a Parliament so thoroughly behind him that its members passed budget measures for him where they had refused for four previous premiers.

In view of these developments reports from the United States that President Roosevelt had asked Congress to give him new tariff powers evoked considerable interest and led to the belief in some quarters that the two leaders might conduct an early exchange of messages on the tariff question.

The chief obstacle to a trade agreement between France and the United States has been considered the limited flexibility of their tariff systems.

Doumergue is pledged to retain the quota system, but he can fix tariffs subject to later ratification by Parliament, and it was considered likely that he might be able to achieve tariff concessions for debt reduction.

A surplus of 9,000,000 francs revenue over estimated expenditures was contained in the approved budget.

Expenses are expected to be 48,318,570,000 francs (approximately $3,140,707,050).

Brazilian Revolt Plot Is Thwarted

Sao Paulo, Brazil, March 1 (AP).—Plans to assassinate high civil and military officials Saturday, starting a revolutionary movement, were thwarted by the discovery of the plot of army sergeants, the government revealed tonight.

Officials pushed their investigation into the activities of some 200 sergeants and other noncommissioned officers who were arrested yesterday.

U. S. Moves To Guarantee Home Bonds

Roosevelt Asks Action by Congress to Speed Mortgage Relief.

By Leon Dure, jr.

With the twin purposes of speeding up the refinancing of home mortgages and stimulating housing repairs and modernization, President Roosevelt yesterday asked Congress to guarantee the bonds of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation.

In a special message, he urged that principal as well as interest of the potential $2,000,000,000 of bonds be guaranteed, and that the Home Owners' Loan Act be liberalized to allow the corporation to promote private building.

Strengthened by these legislative changes, the once-laggard home loan corporation—which now is lifting almost 1,500 mortgages a day—would be given vast new powers to spread relief for home owners and supplemental employment throughout the Nation.

$266,077,985 in Loans.

Already bonds amounting to $266,077,985 have been substituted for mortgages covering 93,595 homes, with transactions greatly accelerated in the last several months. To this chief function of the HOLC—when relieved of poor market conditions by the Government's guarantee—would be added loans for repairs and home rebuilding.

"On January 10," the President reminded Congress in his message, "I recommend to the Congress the passage of legislation guaranteeing the principal as well as the interest of the $2,000,000,000 of bonds authorized for the refinancing of agricultural indebtedness.

"I now recommend that the home owners' loan act be similarly amended. The purpose of such legislation, as in the case of farm financing, will be to assure the continued progress on a self-sustaining basis of the making of loans for the purpose of refinancing home mortgages without interruption. There is the same reason for acknowledging publicly what al-

Convict to Be Carried to Chair, Weak From Suicide Attempt

Michigan City, Ind., March 1 (AP). Blood transfusions and heroic medical efforts saved the life of Harley Edwards today, that he might be put to death as the State preferred—in the electric chair at midnight.

Doomed for the murder of his wife, he tried to cheat the law by suicide. He was given drugs, stimulants, and the blood of a fellow convict to prolong his life a few hours until the State was ready to take it.

Warden Louis Kunkel announced that he felt certain that Edwards would live long enough to be carried into the death chamber of the Indiana State Penitentiary at 12:01 a. m.

Edwards, morose after Gov. Paul McNutt refused to commute his sentence to life imprisonment, broke the lenses from his reading glasses at 2 a. m. today and slashed his wrists. A guard found him.

The condemned man was rushed to the prison hospital, and Dr. P. H. Weeks, long experienced in treating gunshot and knife wounds after prison disorders, began the battle to prolong his life for a few hours.

A convict whose name prison officials would not reveal donated a pint of blood. The guard had found Edwards just in time to prevent death. He had lost 2 quarts or more of blood.

Although Edwards gained strength, his recovery was not sufficient to make it possible for him to walk from the prison hospital across a narrow passageway and into the death chamber. Arrangements were made to carry him on a cot.

"He will be executed even if we have to carry him to the electric chair in a dying condition," Kunkel said.

Edwards was convicted of killing his estranged wife at Mitchell, Ind., July 23, 1932.

NRA Scores "Chiselers," And Revokes Blue Eagles

Johnson Refers To Jail Penalty

Avalanche of Criticism Felt to Be Turning Public Reaction.

By Raymond Clapper.

NRA began to crack down on chiselers yesterday after three days of open-forum complaints which totaled up into a general indictment that the vast array of codes not only were defective, in many respects, but that wholesale cheating was taking place right under the beak of the Blue Eagle.

Recovery officials have been left somewhat breathless at the vigor and wide extent of the criticisms which have been hurled from every direction. While they invited complaint, the avalanche has been so heavy that there is some concern lest the effect be to leave the country feeling that the Recovery Administration is engaged in a hopelessly complicated task destined to meet a public fate like that which befell Federal prohibition.

On the other hand, the criticisms are so impressive that they give a new weapon to Gen. Johnson in his coming session with code authorities next week, and strengthen his hand in the drive for more effective enforcement, which is the big problem ahead.

12 Eagles Taken Away.

There were signs yesterday that this effort was getting under way without further delay.

Twelve Blue Eagles were snatched away from concerns, mostly cleaning and dyeing establishments. Ten of the cases were referred to the Department of Justice for possible legal action. One was sent to the Federal Trade Commission and one was turned over to State authorities in Ohio for prosecution under the Ohio State recovery act. In another case, the Blue Eagle was not recalled, but the Federal Trade Commission was asked to investigate.

Furthermore, Gen. Johnson issued orders requiring all employes to post conspicuously labor provisions of codes under which they operate so that each workman can readily ascertain what hours, wages and other conditions his employer is pledged to maintain.

Gen. Johnson pointedly called attention to the fact that a fine of up to $500, or imprisonment for not more than six months, was specified in the law for failure to observe such NRA regulations.

This action, it is felt at recovery headquarters, will make employers

Cabinet Quits In Spanish Rift

Lerroux Group Steps Down When Zamora Refuses to Compromise.

Madrid, March 1 (AP).—Internal political difficulties caused the resignation of the cabinet today.

President Niceto Alcala Zamora immediately began conversations with party leaders looking to a solution of the crisis.

Premier Alejandro Lerroux and members of his cabinet handed in their resignations after Lerroux had failed to convince the President a partial reorganization would end internal opposition to Zamora's policies.

Among those called to confer with Zamora were Francisco Cambo, Catalonian Lliga, regionalista chieftain, and Santiago Alba, president of the Cortez.

The crisis was precipitated when Lerroux visited Zamora suggesting the substitution in the cabinet of Salazar Alonzo, Radical Republican leader, and the deputy Marraco for Diego Martinez Barrios, minister of the interior, and Gomez Lara, minister of treasury.

Hunger Marchers Heckle Commons

London, March 1 (U.P.).—A small band of "hunger marchers" caused a disturbance in the House of Commons tonight, shouting defiance and denunciation of the government.

The group sat in the public gallery. The Russian trade agreement was being debated, when suddenly the delegates, here to protest pending unemployment legislation, began shouting. The hecklers were ejected with the assistance of police.

Pu Yi Pledges Manchu Ti Kuo Era of Peace

50,000 Guard Emperor; Japan to Defend Asian Empire.

Hsinking (Changchun), Manchukuo, March 1 (AP).—Under the aegis of 50,000 soldiers, the "radiance of the sun, moon, and stars," and the boyish Emperor Kang Teh, the new "great Manchu Empire" began today an era of construction.

"I proclaim this the first year of Kangte, the era of construction," announced Henry Pu-Yi, 28, as he ascended Manchukuo's orchid throne.

"In cooperation with our great neighbor, Japan, our course will remain as unaltered as the sun in heaven.

"Today, the country is bathed in the radience of the sun, moon, and stars. Heaven favors only those who are virtuous. The establishment of the monarchy affected the salvation of our peoples from the agencies and sufferings of water and fire."

Simple, Safe, Tranquil Rule.

Ceremonies this morning elevating the former boy emperor of China had the stiffness of Japanese military precision, the safety of soldiers and detectives, the color of ancient robes and flags, the austerity of 3,000-year-old traditions.

And, in keeping with the rites, Kang Teh declared his rule would be simple, safe, tranquil and virtuous.

One of Kang Teh's first official acts was to authorize government disbursements and official honors to survivors of Manchukuoan soldiers who died in the establishment of the nation in former Chinese territory by the Japanese.

Japan, under a protocol published today and signed September 15, 1932, undertakes to defend Manchukuo.

Kang Teh indicated the immediate future of the young state when he pointed out the start that already has been made—the building of highways, establishment of railroads and bus lines, organization of an independent army, navy and police force, and the stabilization of currency.

He granted amnesty to prisoners and declared banditry and graft would be eliminated.

It took just four hours to change Henry Pu Yi, the chief executive, into Kang Teh, the Emperor, and to rename Manchukuo to Manchu Ti Kuo—the "Great Manchu Empire."

Heavily Guarded at Rites.

At 8 a. m. he left the palace in a 3-ton armored car, and drove between Manchukuan and Japanese soldiers to the altar of heaven, where only a few hand-picked Manchus, Chinese and Japanese were allowed. Two score newspapermen were allowed to witness the proceedings.

The correspondents, dressed in the prescribed evening clothes and wearing no hats, had to stand for nearly two hours with the temperature below zero.

This ceremony, and the subsequent secular observance in the palace, lasted about 30 minutes, but for them the government appropriated 1,000,000 gold dollars.

NRA Takes Away Blue Eagles

'Cracking Down' Process on Chiselers Starts After Complaints.

more inclined to observe code provisions and will, at the same time, keep workers continuously informed of their rights. Taking no chances, NRA is requiring employers to apply to code authorities for official posters which will be prepared here so that the terms posted will be officially correct and complete.

There was other important action on the labor front outside of NRA. The National Labor Board, headed by Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York, asked the Department of Justice to take over the Weirton Steel Co. labor case, charging the company had refused to permit the board to condut an election among employes and was blocking application of section 7a of the recovery act, which guarantees workers the right of collective bargaining.

Senator Wagner also introduced a bill to strengthen the collective bargaining clause and to give the labor board greater power in dealing with industrial disputes.

Friction Between 2 Groups.

There has been considerable friction between Gen. Johnson's NRA organization and Senator Wagner's Labor Board, and the Senator's action yesterday further registers his dissatisfaction with the conduct of the recovery effort, so far as labor is concerned.

The White House made known that President Roosevelt will address the meeting of code authorities Monday, at 11 a. m., in Constitution Hall, and that the address will be broadcast. This is expected to be a significant address in which the President will attempt to point the future of the recovery program as well as to reassure the public insofar as this week's wave of criticism has tended to cause confusion and doubt as to its ultimate success.

Witnesses continued their complaints in the various group meetings yesterday, but the lists were being cleared up and, in many cases, the stragglers had little to add to what had been said before. Groups were being merged and while the hearings may continue through tomorrow, they may be consolidated into one main meeting. In any event, NRA orders are to keep open house until the last person has been heard.

There were reports that Gen. Johnson himself might take the platform again toward the end of the hearings and ring down the curtain on this field day in the same spectacular manner in which he opened it.

Complaints generally point to the conclusion that NRA has spread out so widely that it has been unable to obtain the degree of enforcement that had been hoped for. Much criticism came, for instance, from small retailers, who complained about such local matters as trade discounts.

Blue Eagle Ignored.

On the labor side, the complaint is, in essence, that employers post the Blue Eagle and then in many cases go ahead and do as they please with their labor. On the consumers side, the complaint is chiefly that business and industry have used the codes to combine in raising prices beyond what increased costs justify.

Edward Foerst, representing the employes' association of the Tidewater Oil Co., of Bayonne, N. J., which he said was not a company union, declared that under the NRA "the purchasing power of the employes has been reduced and there have been no new men hired."

"Our pay envelopes were much fatter before we signed up under the NRA, and that's a fact; that's not just gassing," he added. "The benefits we won through strikes have been lost."

An attack on the graphic arts and newspaper codes for their provisions allowing employment of child labor was made by Miss Belle Sherwin, of the League of Women Voters. Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, representing the National Woman's party, followed her with arguments against sex discrimination in the codes which give women lower wages and shorter hours than men.

There was a str in the audience when Albert Neville, of the International Firemen and Oilers Union, swung up to the platform on crutches to tell of conditions in six shoe factories of Brockton, Mass., where firemen are worked 96 hours a week.

"A man's mind goes numb when he works these long hours," cried Neville. "He don't care whether he blows up a boiler or not."

Operates Under 16 Codes.

He pleaded that the provisions in codes which exempt firemen because of the emergency character of their work be removed.

The long succession of labor spokesmen was varied for a few minutes with the appearance of Howard A. Swartwood, assistant secretary and general counsel of the Endicott Johnson Corporation, tanners and shoe manufacturers. Swartwood said his corporation had 18,500 employes and an annual payroll of $22,000,000, and that it operated under 16 different codes.

"I wish to speak in behalf of those employers of labor who are not chiselers or cheaters; in behalf of those employers who honestly believe in this recovery program; in behalf of those employers, who, from the beginning, have given NRA their whole-hearted support, and who have sincerely complied with the codes to which they are subject," said Swartwood.

These employers, he said, are now paying wages far above the code minimums and their employment averages are well above the 1926 index. "They have been able to do this and still make a profit because of efficient management and conservative capitalization," Swartwood continued.

"Mr. Administrator, if you determine a shorter work week is necessary, I urge you to protect these honest and sincere supporters of your Administration. You can do this only by writing into the codes, along with the reduction of hours, a provision which will substantially increase all minimum wages.

Higher Minimum Asked.

"When I say you must include a provision including minimum wages, I do not mean a provision which merely requires an increase of rates to produce the present total minimum for the shorter work week. I mean a provision that will require for the shorter work week a total weekly salary which is substantially higher than the present weekly minimum."

The charge by M. H. Hedges, of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, that NRA was "benevolent Fascism under the guise of Democracy," drew a question from Edward F. McGrady, assistant labor administrator for NRA.

"I understand that in Fascism the so-called unions are run by the Government," he said.

"Yes," answered Hedges, "but industry stands back of the Government."

The American Federation of Labor renewed its demand for a 30-hour week through John P. Frey, secretary of the metal trades department of the A. F. of L. He said unemployment never could be wiped out under a longer workweek. He also criticized the lower wage scale permitted in the South under many codes, citing one Southern plant operating under four codes.

He said a man could be working in the morning at a rate of 25 cents an hour, and in the afternoon be put to work on another article produced under another code requiring 32 cents an hour pay.

The general Southern differentials created discriminations against various localities, Frey said. Covington, Ky., he said, has a 5 per cent lower wage level under some codes than Cincinnati, directly across the river. Under some codes, Baltimore obtained a similar advantage over Philadelphia, because of Maryland's inclusion in the Southern area, though they seek the same markets so far as interstate business is concerned.

Terrorism Is Charged.

Western Pennsylvania's treatment of labor also came under renewed attack yesterday following the denunciation of conditions by Mrs. Gifford Pinchot on the previous day. E. P. Cush, president of the Steel and Metal Workers Industrial Union, said terrorism had rendered efforts to enforce section 7a for collective bargaining futile.

not hold meetings for organization purposes in Duquesne, Braddock and Homestead, and that the reason Secretary of Labor Perkins was denied the right to speak there, except on Federal property last fall, was because he would also thereby obtain the same privilege. He charged the Westinghouse Halstead and Duquesne plants were using the stretch-out system to greater effect than in 40 years.

S. Klein, New York retail dress store owner, said a 5-day 40-hour week would increase employment in retail stores 20 per cent. He urged that this be done without reduction of pay.

The group concerned with small enterprises ran out of witnesses. This section, dealing with the problems over which there has been vociferous complaint, was the first to wind up its hearings completely.

The final witness, J. B. Holcomb, of Pittsburgh, who declined to name his connection, said he was with a large manufacturing concern which could produce for less money than in 1914, though it was paying higher wages. NRA's job, he said, is to marshal all manufacturers to do the same thing.

Francis J. Gorman, vice president of the United Textile Workers, said cotton textile codes have not benefited labor because of code administration favorable to the industry. He said that despite labor protests, the stretch-out system was being used more than ever. "Violations multiply and discontent grows apace," he said.

Minor Charges NRA Lunacy.

Robert Minor, Communist leader, continued his round of group meetings, declaring NRA is pursuing "lunatic economics," and that abolition of the capitalist system is the only answer. He stood stoutly by his previous refusal to accept Gen. Johnson's invitation to join NRA and help. Once he turned his fire on the Administration's claim that child labor had been abolished.

"The solution of the child labor problem by NRA," he said, "has been to throw youths out of work into the gutters, alleys and poolhalls to become hoboes. Child labor can be abolished, not by divorcing these young people from industry, but by giving them opportunity to study and find a place in life instead of being exploited in industry. Grown men are receiving the wages that these children were being paid."

Albert Stetzer, of the Mule Battery Manufacturing Co., Providence, R. I., complained that he wanted to sell storage batteries under a 15-month guarantee, but the code authority ruled he could give no more than a 90-day guarantee.

Eagles, Hoyas In Cage Tilts Tonight

American U. Will Oppose Virginia Medical; G. U. to Play Loyola.

BASKET BALL all but disappears from the sports calendar tonight as American U. concludes its season, meeting Virginia Medical College, while Georgetown entertains Loyola at Tech High School. Georgetown does not play its final game until next week, when Carnegie Tech will be its opponent.

American goes into action at 8 o'clock, and it will be a determined crew that faces the Medicos. The Eagles did remarkably well this season despite their small squad and inexperience, and can end the campaign with a balance in the win column if triumphant tonight. Reinard and Porter, forwards; Hill, center; Crampton and Sampson, guards, probably will start for American.

Georgetown rules a slight favorite over Loyola, but the Baltimoreans have a good chance for putting over an upset. The Hoyas have not played since absorbing a second defeat by Pitt last Saturday, while Loyola, too, has not seen action for a week.

The Georgetown Frosh and Emerson Institute will play a preliminary game at 7:30 o'clock.

Fort Collins, Colo., March 1 (AP).—Murder Charges were filed here today against Louis and John Pacheco, brothers, held in Denver.

Sholl's in Finale Tomorrow Night

Meets Center All Stars at Roosevelt High.

The Sholl's undefeated five will make its farewell appearance of the season against the Community Center All-Stars at Roosevelt High tomorrow night at 9 o'clock. A preliminary game between the Olmsted Grill basketers and the Twin Oak Black Hawks will open the proceedings at 8 o'clock.

Members of the Community All-Stars are requested to meet with Freddy Mesmer, who will coach them for the Sholl's game, in the McKinley gymnasium immediately following the Georgetown-Loyola game tonight.

The Twin Oaks team appearing in the preliminary game is undefeated in the Community Center minor league. Olmsted has been beaten once—by Katzman Tailors. A win for the Twin Oaks aggregation will give them the Community Center minor league championship.

A win by the Olmsted Grillers will result in a three-way tie between that team, the Twin Oaks five and Katzman's Tailors for the title. In event of the three-way tie, the matter will be thrashed out in the games next week.

People's Lobby Hits Work Plan As New Farce

Prof. Dewey Asks Congress to Stop Experiments in Human Misery.

Calling upon Congress to "stop the President's favorite indoor pastime of playing new deal politics with human misery," the People's Lobby, headed by Prof. John Dewey, of Columbia University, yesterday issued a statement branding as "blind blunderbussing" President Roosevelt's proposed substitute for the CWA.

The statement reads:

"To keep people from starving after the inevitable failure of the stupid NRA, the President devised the scheme of putting people at manufactured work under the CWA. May 1 was set as the magic date upon which industry would reemploy about 4,000,000 people.

"A full month before April Fool's Day has called that bluff, and caused the Administration to fear a genuine May Day uprising instead of reemployment.

"Now comes another of the tricks from our Presidential trickster—folks are to be sent to suburbs and deserts, and light industry is to bloom like a century plant, to give them work for six months, and then by another promised waving of the Presidential wand, commercial employment will be in full bloom.

"The President must underestimate the credulity of the American people.

"In the meantime he is keeping very special privilege which loots the American people going full tilt. Unaffected by the Nationwide protest at this week's hearings on the NRA, against the futile hypocrisy of the whole scheme, he opens up his card case and pronounces he has drawn an ace of spades. The unemployed are to be put to work digging up the ground so far from congested centers of former industrial activity that they will not disturb the chant of officeholders praising the dawn of prosperity."

Mexico, D. F. (AP).—To speed the government's school program the department of education has ordered all rural employers of more than 300 persons to establish schools on their properties. The estate owners also must pay for the technical education of one person for every 300 working for them.

Prince Bares Lurid Details Of Murder of 'Mad Monk'

Tells Court Rasputin Had Partly Hypnotized Him First.

London, March 1 (AP).—New details—piling horror on horror—regarding the death of the sinister Monk Rasputin in the St. Petersburg Imperial Palace were recited by Prince Felix Youssoupoff today in an excited London court.

The descendant of high Russian nobility told how he was partly hypnotized by the mad monk, how he gave his victim poisoned cakes and wine, and then shot, and beat him to death before a crucifix.

Prince Youssoupoff testified in his wife's $2,000,000 suit against a film company for allegedly libeling her in a film depicting Rasputin and the Russian Czarina. Passages from a book by the prince were read to "show the picture historically inaccurate."

Describes Poisoning.

Sir William Jowitt, for the defense, asked the prince if, just before the slaying, he was not suffering from nervous strain, so that he hardly knew what he was doing.

"It was quite natural," replied the witness quietly. "I am not a professional murderer.

"I did not, however, entirely lose my head at the time of the killing. I sang songs to the monk for half an hour before giving him poisoned cakes and wine."

Then, he went on, he shot the monk and clubbed the bleeding form when a coconspirator's final shot apparently had not finished the gruesome assassination.

Rasputin's last look, he said, was one of intense hatred. The monk frothed at the mouth and turned toward the prince, realizing he was poisoned. He fell back heavily on a rug and "roared like a wild beast."

Attack on U. S. Lawyer.

An attack on an American woman lawyer retained by Princess Irena Youssoupoff was made late today by the defense.

Before Prince Youssoupoff left the witness stand Sir William questioned him concerning Miss Fanny Holtzman, a New York attorney retained by the prince's wife.

"I suggest she has been exploiting your wife," Sir William remarked.

The princess previously denied on the stand that she authorized Miss Holtzman last August to "settle for money," and insisted her original aim was only to halt the presentation of the picture, which, she alleges, linked her with the mysterious Rasputin.

Prince Felix Youssoupoff testifying yesterday in London, told of slaying Rasputin to rid the imperial Russiant court of the "Mad Monk's" influence.

Dandruff Germs Cause
BALDNESS
Almost 90% of all cases of baldness can be traced to some form of dandruff infection. Dandruff is caused by minute "germs" (known technically as Flaschenbacilli of Unna and bacille a bouteille of Sabouraud). The sketch at the left, made from a microscope slide, shows these dandruff germs, greatly enlarged.
Thomas treatment removes dandruff germs from the scalp, and leaves it antiseptically free of infection. It stops abnormal hair-fall, ends scalp itch, and permits hair to grow again on the thin and bald spots. Call today for a free scalp examination and see for yourself exactly how this reliable, proved method overcomes all types of local scalp ills.

Monetary Law Delay Is Urged By Morgenthau

Asks Congress to Give More Time for Gold Experiment.

and Gov. Black called at the White House to discuss with the President plans for the intermediate credit agencies, which would extend medium and long time loans to business.

No decision has been reached, nor have plans advanced beyond a preliminary stage, said Mr. Morgenthau. He said the President told them "to go home and do some more work."

Administration opposition to immediate Congressional action on the Goldsborough money bill will not deter the House Banking sub-committee from resuming hearings on the measure next week, Representative T. Alan Goldsborough (Democrat), author of the bill and chairman of the sub-committee, said last night.

Asked to Wait.

Prof. A. F. Pierson, of Cornell, and Father Charles C. Coughlin, of Detroit, will testify Tuesday on the bill, which would deprive the Federal Reserve system of its currency issuing powers. Frank A. Vanderlip will appear the following day.

Goldsborough said he saw nothing in Secretary Morgenthau's testimony to deter the committee from reporting the bill.

The Treasury told the committee its study "is worthwhile and important," but added, emphatically:

"The Administration is not ready for such legislation. We want the benefit of at least a year of our present policy."

Cites Gold Rise.

Submitting a chart, Morgenthau cited figures to show that since February, 1933, the world price of gold had risen 68 per cent and farm commodities 57 per cent, and pointed out that "both appear to be going along pretty well together."

"We have got to keep our minds absolutely open and meet things as they come," he said. "As long as it is working well, we should try it a little longer and give it a chance.

"But I am not saying if it stopped working and prices took a nose dive, that I will not be up here tomorrow pleading for something else."

Answering Representative Jeff Busby (Democrat), Mississippi, who wanted to know if the Government was meeting its money obligations, the Treasury executive declared the Administration "for the first time in years is setting the pace and determining the monetary policy of the Nation."

Outcome in Doubt.

"The country is coming through one of the most difficult banking crises it ever had and we are just beginning to see daylight a little," he said, frequently repeating himself in driving home his points.

"What the future monetary policy of the country will be I doubt any one is sufficiently wise to say, because we haven't had enough experience.

"Inside of a few weeks we changed the gold price to $35 an ounce, and we have had the use of a $2,000,000,000 fund to stabilize the currency. But it is impossible to tell what the future will be and just how to handle it."

If the Administration has supplemental plans for raising the commodity price level, Mr. Morgenthau did not disclose them. He said he thought everything possible is being done "to improve domestic prices."

Quizzed on Silver Plan.

England's elevated price level, he declared, simply reflected the United States' rise in gold prices.

Asked about progress of the Government's silver-purchase program, and the effect of rising silver prices on purchasing power of silver countries, Secretary Morgenthau said it could not be measured.

Monster Is Identified As Bottlenose Whale

Cherbourg, France, March 1 (AP). A "sea monster" found on the beach here today was identified by Prof. Corbierre, eminent scholar of natural history, as a rare form of hyperoodon—in plain language a bottlenose whale.

Strange, unwhalelike contours on the mammal were found on close inspection to be the result of the wear and tear of rocks as the carcass washed ashore.

'M. L.' Another New Deal Natural

Milburn Lincoln Wilson Subsistence Homesteads Win New Converts.

Professor an Authority on Two Extremes of Farm Problems.

The identity of the author of "The New Dealers" must remain undisclosed. Publication of the material in The Washington Post does not necessarily imply editorial indorsement of his views.

By the Unofficial Observer.

THE methods employed by David E. Lilienthal in handling private power interests was to tell them and the South that he did not intend to enter into unfair competition or to allow the Tennessee Valley Authority's exemption from taxation and Government capital to operate as a "subsidy" against private concerns. As a result of his "yard-stick" rate-system and his ,.000,000 Government corporation to finance the purchase of electrical appliances by individual consumers, at the end of 1933 he was able to make his broad compact with the Commonwealth and Southern utilities group. Under this, the private group sold some of its transmission and distributing lines to the TVA, and a general agreement was reached on the transmission and distribution of power to more distant points.

The South is already beginning to feel the benefit of cheaper power. Within a decade, the Tennessee Valley, one of the most backward parts of the Nation, may be its garden spot. The renaissance of a whole region has begun, exactly as President Roosevelt envisioned it sitting by his fireside at Warm Springs. The skeptics who slightingly referred to his "grandiose dreams" when he first unfolded his plans are now seeing the first outlines of those "dreams" translated into concrete accomplishments, for Roosevelt was not dreaming. It was his opponents who were walking in their sleep.

Closely allied to this "dream" of regional regeneration is the broader "dream" embodied in the program for "subsistence homesteads." A century ago, American industry operated on a basis of water-power and industrial labor lived on "subsistence homesteads"—small farms which provided the family with food, while industrial employment provided money for clothes, taxes, and the growing list of economic incidentals. This system robbed unemployment of its worst terrors — homelessness and starvation — and produced a phenomenally happy and vigorous civilization.

Coal Led to Growth Of Industrial Cities.

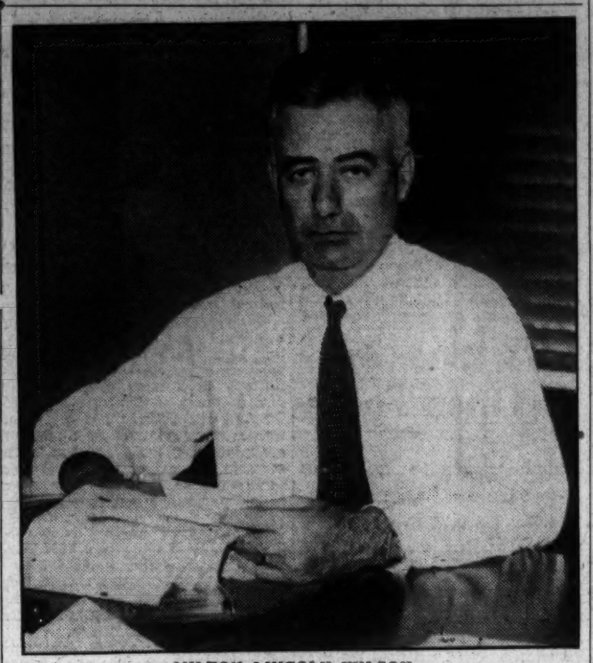
Then industry shifted from water-power, which was where you found it, to coal, which was so bulky that it could be employed efficiently only in a comparatively few centers, linked by rail and water with the mining regions. The result was the modern industrial city, with its congestion, its high land values, and its high living costs. This monstrous metropolitan growth, in turn, led to the overspecialization of farming and industry, creating gigantic cleavages of political and moral sentiment, and exposing both the farmer and the city dweller to the bitter winds of monetary supply and demand. The inevitable result was homelessness and want in the cities and stagnation and confusion on the farms.

President Roosevelt, however, and a small group which included Louis Howe, Mrs. Roosevelt and Bernard MacFadden, realized that the development of the automobile and hard-surfaced highway and the introduction of high-tension transmission of hydro-electric energy had instituted an economic counter-revolution against the age of coal.

It was becoming increasingly profitable for all industries save the "heavy industries" to decentralize and establish factories in country regions, where land-prices and taxes were low, where transportation problems were not hampered by vehicular congestion, and where living costs facilitated the reduction of wage-scales. At the same time, the impact of the depression stimulated a movement to take the unemployed out of the cities and dump them on "subsistence farms," where they could at least grow their own food and be sure of a roof over their heads.

As a result of these two forces, six months after Congress had appropriated $25,000,000 to be expended under the direction of the President for the establishment of "subsistence homesteads" — dwellings equipped with gardens sufficient to enable a worker to grow food for his family after factory hours—the Director of the Division of Subsistence Homesteads had received applications which called for the expenditure of $4,000,000,000 for this purpose.

Roosevelt had again rolled a "natural". The new unit was set up in the Department of the Interior, under the direction of Prof. Milburn Lincoln Wilson (known among farm leaders and throughout the Government as "M. L.") and the first major experiment was initiated in West Virginia, where a combined farm-and-factory community was established for the economic rehabilitation of the stranded coal-miners of that desolate region.



MILTON LINCOLN WILSON,
"M. L." to Government workers, head of the largest directed experiment in subsistence farming since the closing of the American frontier.

"M. L." an Authority on Extremes in Farming.

"M. L." is an authority on the two extremes of farming—subsistence farming and large-scale farming. He is recognized as one of the world's greatest authorities on large-scale wheat production; now he is at at the head of the largest directed experiment in subsistence farming since the closing of the American frontier.

He was born 48 years ago on a farm near Atlantic, Iowa; he grew up on a farm and was educated at the Iowa Agricultural College. In 1907 he went to Western Nebraska as a tenant wheat farmer and three years later he filed on a homestead of 320 acres in Montana, where he raised still more wheat. His experiences in Montana brought him face to face with the problem of diversification of crops. The marginal lands of the northern praries, coupled with uncertain weather and violent fluctuations in prices, made wheat production unprofitable on an annual basis. The farmer made a lot of money about one year out of four or five. The other years he would have a hard time finding enough to eat. The prairie farmers had neither gardens, cows nor pigs. They were not farmers at all; they were one-crop industrialists and their lands were operated as wheat factories.

Thus Montana provided "M. L." with a great laboratory. For wheat production to be profitable at all, it had to be conducted on a large scale and with the use of efficient machinery. And yet the farmer had to have something to fall back on in the recurrent lean years. So "M. L." went into scientific agriculture.

He began by becoming county agent for Custer County, Montana, under the system by which the Federal, State and county governments support agents to show farmers how to improve their farming. "M. L." soon became head of all the county agents for the State and then was employed by Montana State College at Bozeman, as professor of agricultural economics. From time to time he studied economics at the Universities of Wisconsin and Chicago, and in 1925 spent a year in Washington as an expert in farm management in the Department of Agriculture.

Showed Montana How to Grow Wheat on Big Scale.

During the war he had showed Montana how to produce wheat on a big scale and those who remember the slogan "Food Will Win the War" may as well admit that this slogan was about the only one of many war-time cat-calls which had any truth in it. The present plight of the American farmers is due almost entirely to the war-time stimulus given to our agriculture. They are the economic veterans of the struggle. Wilson's tracts on scientific wheat production were known throughout the country and he even devised the most efficient way to hitch 40 horses to the huge combines which cut and threshed the grain.

In 1929, Soviet Russia sent for him to show them how to operate their great state grain farms in the North Caucasus, where the land is semiarid, as it is in Montana. Wilson showed the muzjiks of the Caucasus how to operate huge American farm machines and how to raise wheat on 100,000-acre farms.

In the meantime, falling prices and the growing glut of wheat had forced Wilson to interest himself in the broadest aspects of the farm problem in the post-war decade. He was not satisfied with the McNary-Haugen formula of subsidized exports. All around him in Montana he saw natural grazing land that had been plowed up for the production of wheat and saw wheat farmers struggling to wring a living out of an era of falling prices. He saw that this land should be retired from production.

Syndicate to Hunt Treasure in Africa

East London, South Africa (AP).—Buried treasure believed to lie along the coast between East London and the Keiskama River is to be sought by a syndicate.

Records show that in the early days, when wind-jammers carried valuable cargoes to England from India, many ships were wrecked near here.

There also is a widely held theory that the first white people to land along the eastern coast were buccaneers whose wrecked ship carried bullion and gems, which the survivors cached ashore.

Loafing Charge Starts Inquiry In Arlington

Sewer Survey Employes Invite Investigation, Asserts Braden.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

A thorough investigation into the charges made by one of the county board members that some of the employes of the engineering office, conducting surveys for the sewerage system, have been loafing on the job was promised yesterday by County Manager Roy S. Braden.

"I shall go to the bottom of this and propose to request Christopher B. Garnett, board member who has made the charges, to make known the persons who have given him this information," Braden said.

"Every employe in the engineering office is just as anxious as I am to have this matter gone into, as they feel it is a reflection on them," Braden asserted. "In this investigation I shall be assisted by Chief Engineer Allen B. McDaniels, who is in direct charge of all the work."

Bids including terra-cotta pipe are $85,022 higher than those calling for concrete piping. This has delayed awarding of contracts for materials for the first year's installation, it was learned last night.

The board will determine today which grade of pipe shall be used, in order that awards may be made.

Astors Gaining "Family Bloc" In Parliament

American-British Clan in Both Houses Has Strong Hold.

London (AP).—The Astors are making Parliament a family affair.

They have run up their representation through the by-election successes of Ronald Tree, grandson of the late Marshall Field, of Chicago, and Lord Willoughby de Eresby, who married Lord and Lary Astor's daughter, Phyllis, last July.

Viscount Astor sits in the House of Lords while the other three, headed by Lady Astor, the formet Nancy Langhorne, of Virginia, compose the "Astor bloc" in the House of Commons.

Tree, who became naturalized as a British citizen little more than a year ago, qualifies as a member of the group since his wife is a niece of Lady Astor.

Counting in Maj. John Jacob Astor, Viscount Astor's brother, and Lieut. Col. Herbert H. Spencer-Clay, who married Pauline, the viscount's sister, the Astor group numbers six.

Since Lord and Lady Astor also have two politically eligible sons, political observers are already speculating what the additions of these reinforcements would mean.

Tree, who like Lord and Lady Astor is of American birth, was a son by her first marriage of the late Countess Beatty, wife of Lord Beatty, British World War admiral.

He is 36, served in Italy and France with the United States air service in the war, went on a mission to Albania and Montenegro during the peace conference and from 1922 to 1926 was managing editor of Forum Magazine, New York.

Not long ago he bought Ditchley Park of 3,000 acres, the Oxfordshire seat of Viscount Dillon. The Tree home, however, is Kelmarsh Hall, where he has often entertained the Prince of Wales and his brothers.

Virginia House Appropriations Bill Passed

$103,610 Added After Committee Acts; Goes to Senate.

Richmond, March 1 (AP).—The huge general appropriations bill was passed today by the House of Delegates and sent to the Senate—carrying $103,610 more than when it came from the appropriations committee. The vote was 74-15.

Delegates who sought to cut appropriations could not get together. The committee itself had added $96,318 to the bill so that it reaches the Senate with general fund appropriations $199,928 in excess of the amount recommended to the Assembly by the Governor.

The principal increase was $125,000 for a building to replace the condemned Tyler building at the school for the deaf and blind, at Staunton. The House also saw a repetition of the unsuccessful attempt of yesterday to add $1,000,000 each year to the public school appropriation prior to action on the Governor's $875,000 tax bill, which is a special order tomorrow.

The salary of the director of the motor vehicle division was raised from $5,000 to $6,000. That of the commissioner of fisheries was cut from $5,500 to $5,000 after an attack by Delegate George W. Herring, of Prince William. Previously the House had rejected an amendment by Delegate A. E. Segar, of Middlesex, to cut the fish commissioner's salary to $4,500.

Senator W. A. Garrett, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said tonight he had not decided when the committee would take up the appropriations bill.

Loudoun Irked By Relief Cost

Meeting Tuesday Will Take Up Fiscal Problem of Welfare.

Leesburg, Va., March 1 (Spl.). Because of the mounting cost of caring for the needy of Loudoun County, the Board of Supervisors will meet as a committee in the clerk's office here Tuesday morning to investigate the high cost and discuss modifications.

The meeting was decided this morning when the board assembled to consider bills presented by doctors and the hospital for the care of indigents. The board will investigate some of these cases at the Tuesday session.

Clerk E. O. Russell reported $16,165.56 was spent in welfare work in Loudoun County for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1933. The hospital bills for the care of indigents amounted to $2,987, as against the $2,200 set aside in the budget for this item.

Miss Helen Pittman, county nurse, reported one destitute family, consisting of an ill mother, idle father and nine children, ages ranging from 4 months to 13 years. The board ordered the mother and children sent to the almshouse and the father put to work. Another family was ordered returned to Fauquier County, whence it came less than a year ago.

District Man Guilty In Virginia Charge

Pays Fine; Pre-Trial Term Covers Sentence.

Harrisonburg, Va., March 1 (Spl.). Daniel L. Smith, 32, of East Capitol street, Washington, was given a 60-day jail sentence and a fine of $50 this afternoon by a Rockingham circuit court jury on a charge of house breaking, in connection with the Merchants Grocery Warehouse cigarette robbery here last December.

Smith was released after paying his fine and costs, which amounted to $233. He had been held in jail 70 days. The verdict was a surprise to officers and was described as "rather remarkable" by Judge H. W. Bertram.

Philip Davis and James R. Henkel, of Alexandria, who were caught in the building, previously received penitentiary terms. They testified that Smith, who was on the outside of the building, had no part in the burglary.

Danville Prisoners Fed at Low Cost

Daily Expense 31 Cents Per Man at Farm.

Danville Va., March 1 (Spl.). Danville's new city farm, with an average population of 44 prisoners a day, has been operated since last August at an average cost of 31 cents per man per day, C. L. Scott, city engineer, will report to the city council next week.

Scott is asking that the city council and the State welfare department agree on a proposal to transfer 50 State prisoners, now in jail, to the city farm, which has a capacity for 120 men. If that is done the cost of sustaining the prisoners will be reduced to about 15 cents per day, he says.

The prisoners have raised crops which have provided part of their own food supply, the surplus going to the almshouse and to the Danville Relief Agency for distribution among the poor.

New Delinquent Tax Collection System Sponsored for Virginia

Senator Rust, of Fairfax, Would Shift Work to Treasurers.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Richmond, March 1. — Virginia taxpayers would save tens of thousands of dollars a year under a delinquent tax bill he will seek to put through the Legislature, Senator John W. Rust, Fairfax, declared today.

The measure would transfer from county clerks to treasurers responsibility for collecting all taxes in arrears. As treasurers have been placed on straight salaries, property owners would be relieved of the burden of paying fees to clerks.

Rust explained that his proposal would reduce confusion by placing all real estate tax collections under the treasurers. At present the treasurers handle current levies and clerks those which have become delinquent.

"Present methods of collection," Rust added, "have caused many complaints. They are unbusinesslike and a nuisance to the public. The bill was unanimously approved in committee.

"Passage ought to strengthen the finances of the counties, as the treasurers are especially empowered to use every effort to collect while heretofore, when taxes have been returned delinquent no effort whatever has been made by the clerks to collect.

The Fairfax Senator predicted his proposal would be approved by both houses and signed by the Governor.

Slot Machines For School Aid Before House

West Virginia Body Votes to Consider Bill by 1 Ballot.

Charleston, W. Va., March 1 (Spl.).—By a one-vote margin, a bill to legalize slot-machines as a school revenue measure was placed before the West Virginia House of Delegates today.

When it was reported out by the taxation and finance committee, a motion by Delegate George A. Rairdon (Republican), Mason, to kill it failed by 37 to 38.

"I'm willing to let West Virginia default before I'll sacrifice my children to the operation of gambling devices," declared Rairdon, who previously had submitted a minority committee report for rejection.

An annual tax of $1,000, on automatic vending devices and games is contemplated in the bill, introduced by Delegate John H. Noll (Democrat), Jackson, "by request." No limit is placed on the number of machines, but a $5 fee is required for each.

Senator Ray W. Garvin (Democrat), Harrison, introduced a resolution in the Senate to discharge the joint CWA investigating committee with instructions to submit no report and incur no further expense, but immediate consideration was blocked by a vote of 15 to 11, and it went over until tomorrow.

A resolution to pay Senators $500 as "expense money" was introduced by George C. Beneke (Republican), Ohio, but action was deferred until tomorrow. The House passed a like resolution a few days ago to pay members $150 each.

Bill to Tax Power Lines Introduced

Charlottesville Charter Amendment Sought.

Richmond, March 1 (Spl.).—Amendment of the Charlottesville city charter to permit taxation of transmission lines was requested of the Legislature today by Delegate E. O. McCue, jr. Such permission was asked by Charlottesville officials on the ground that Virginia Public Service Corporation, the utility involved, was not paying anything for the privilege of using the streets.

Company representatives said Assembly passage would precipitate litigation. They contended the State granted the corporation authority to install lines throughout the Commonwealth.

Meanwhile, McCue permitted the House Finance Committee to indefinitely postpone action on his bill to tax chain stores. The author said the measure would have better chances of passage at the 1936 session.

The bill would have placed a $50 tax on every unit of chain stores.

Peery Holding Up Signature On Liquor Bill

Politicians Feel Governor Is Dodging Naming Rum Board.

By Doug Warrenfels.

Richmond, Va., March 1.—Apparent efforts of Gov. Peery to delay the effective date of liquor legislation today caused circulation of reports that business men instead of politicians were in line for rum control board appointments.

Observers declare the Governor was employing every device to get the Legislature out of Richmond before making known his board selections to prevent retaliation by disappointed Assemblymen.

Politicians pointed out scores of solons have indorsed numerous candidates for the $7,500 posts. In addition, several of the Governor's spokesmen in the Assembly have been mentioned as possible appointees.

Incidentally, House action in voting to increase the salary of T. McCall Frazier, motor vehicle director, from $5,000 to $6,000 a year, was regarded as likely to bring withdrawal of his candidacy for the liquor board chairmanship.

Friends of Frazier said his principal reason for seeking the whisky assignment was to earn more money. They indicated he would be satisfied with his present post if the Senate approved the $1,000 raise in pay.

As matters now stand, the Governor may not sign the liquor bill until the middle of next week. That would mean the measure would not become effective until March 20 or 25 while the Legislature is due to adjourn March 12.

McGuffey's Reader Use Urged in Bill

West Virginia Senate Gets Prison Print Plan.

Charleston, W. Va., March 1 (Spl.). Use of the famous McGuffey readers in elementary schools of the State is sought in a bill introduced by Senator Lee J. Sandridge (Democrat), Barbour.

The measure also calls for the use of Ray's arithmetic and directs that both series of books be printed in the State Penitentiary printing office at Moundsville.

The books would be provided students without cost.

A bill to require motorists to stop before passing a halted school bus has been killed in the House of Delegates, under a ruling by Speaker Ralph M. Hiner (Democrat), Pendleton, sustaining a technical objection raised by Delegate Herman J. Poling (Democrat), Barbour, that the measure did not come under provisions of the Governor's call for the special session. The measure had been sponsored by Senator C. E. Hodges (Democrat), Monongalia.

Hit-Run Motorist Admits Injuring 2

Danville, Va., March 1 (Spl.).—Clarence Carter, 28, Pittsylvania County storekeeper, was under $1,000 bond today charged with being the car driver who last Sunday struck Flenton and Okry Davis, colored brothers, as they tramped through the storm on the Piedmont highway 4 miles north of Chatham, and left them unconscious in near-zero weather with fractured skulls and broken legs.

Chief of Police Clarence Johnson of Chatham said Carter admitted his guilt when called on to explain bloodstains on his car. His explanation was that one of the bodies smashed his windshield, gashing his face so that it was necessary for him to keep going to Chatham in order to get medical aid.

Half an hour after the accident a passing car found the victims. They are in a local hospital partially conscious and still in a serious condition.

Foulois Is Firm Army Equipped To Fly Mail

Air Corps Chief's Mind Not Changed by 6 Fatal Crashes.

By Frank Getty.

A staunch defense of the Army Air Corps' competency to carry the air mail as long as the Administration desires was made before a secret session of the House Military Affairs sub-committee on aviation yesterday by Maj. Gen. Benjamin D. Foulois.

Deviating for the day from its probe of Army aircraft procurement methods, the committee, of which Representative Rogers (Democrat), New Hampshire, is chairman, called upon the Chief of Air Corps for his answer to charges of unfitness, incompetence and "legalized murder" directed recently against military fliers and the Administration.

Gen Foulois' answer, in no uncertain terms, was that the Army Air Corps was quite as well fitted as commercial companies to handle the Nation's air-mail business.

It was revealed sometime before the cancellation of the commercial carriers' contracts, the Chief of Air Corps and his assistants were consulted by President Roosevelt as to whether they were equal to the task if the necessity arose.

At that time, Gen. Foulois assured the President that the Army airmen were capable and ready, and promised adequate air-mail service under the proposed change.

Deaths Don't Change Mind.

In view of subsequent developments, including the deaths of six Army air-mail pilots and the loss of a dozen ships, the Rogers committee, which has questioned the chief of Air Corps on other matters pertaining to plane purchases, decided to ask him directly whether he had changed his mind.

Gen. Foulois told the committee he not only had advised the Administration that the Air Corps was in shape for the task a month ago, but that such is the case today. He deplored attacks upon the Air Corps for circumstances beyond human control, and insisted the Army fliers now and henceforth, as long as required, can do just as good a job with the air mail as can commercial companies.

The Rogers committee will not meet today, pending passage by the House of the resolution of Representative McSwain (Democrat), South Carolina, empowering the Military Affairs Committee to hire investigators and go into charges of "profiteering and irregularities" in War Department purchases.

This new probe, when authorized by the House, will be inspirited by yesterday's clash between McSwain and Secretary of War Dern.

Answering Dern's attack on two of his recent bills as "prompted by self-interest" and "beyond any sane estimate," McSwain replied with a warning that the Military Affairs Committee "intends to assert its constitutional right and power to formulate legislation governing the War Department."

Objects to New Planes.

One of the bills to which Dern objected was to increase the Army's maximum permissible airplane strength from 1,800 to 4,384. This would be construed by the world as evidence either of militarism or immediate war, he said.

"The need for additional air power is greater than ever," McSwain replied. "It can not be minimized by the fact that this committee contemplates legislation regulating the administration and control of this increased air power, which seems to be worrying the War Department.

"Moreover, there will be no legislation for the War Department of any kind until the committee has finished a thorough investigation into how the War Department has been spending national defense money."

Members of the military affairs committee felt, they said yesterday, that Dern's chief objection to the bills was the feature of one which would provide for a separate budget and a separate promotion list for the Army Air Corps. This, the War Secretary had said, would be creating a "corps d'elite," and was both "one-sided" and "partisan."

Committee members said Dern was dominated by the general staff of the Army, one of whose officers had prepared this part of the Secretary's criticism.

bility of employment of Kahn was read into the record. It said in part:

"You will no doubt remember Woolley (James G. Woolley, former vice president of Western Air Express). Kahn was his assistant doing special work in the Traffic Department of W. A. E. and also political work in Washington. I understand he is a very bright young man, but due to his youth I am not familiar with the extent of his experience. It is my belief, however, that his service with us was entirely satisfactory.

Knew Kahn's Parents.

"I knew his father, Congressman Julius Kahn, and know his mother, Congresswoman Florence P. Kahn, and they were both highly intelligent people and particularly well thought of in California and Washington."

Hanshue revealed that his own personal salary and expense accounts in 1930 amounted to between $86,000 and $96,000. Of this, $16,000 came from the General Aviation Corporation, $23,000 from Western Air and $27,000 for expenses during the year. From Transcontinental and Western Air Express, he said, during the first part he received $30,000 annual salary, which during the year was reduced to $20,000.

He admitted that he had been forced into an agreement with American Airways in order to get a mail contract.

"Who told you that?" asked Black.

"Postmaster General Brown. We had to do it to get the mail."

The contract provided that Western Air would not operate a faster or cheaper service in territory already covered by American Airways. The whole arrangement, declared the witness, had the approval of Brown.

Says W. A. E. Made Goat.

Regarding the merger between Western Air and Transcontinental Air Transport to form T. & W. A., Black introduced a memorandum written by Hanshue in which he said:

"W. A. E. has been dismembered and sacrificed and made the goat to pull T. A. T., poorly conceived and managed, out of a hole."

After a lengthy examination, Hanshue admitted that the memorandum was correct and was a true expression of his sentiments, but that this combination, in addition to the American Airways contract, was part of the consideration for getting a mail contract from the Postoffice Department.

Alfred Frank, president of the National Parks Airway, whose line was listed as a possible exception by Postmaster General Farley in his charges of fraud and collusion as reasons for canceling all domestic air-mail contracts, took the stand late in the day.

Frank said he had not been invited to the 1930 "spoils conference," but heard about the meeting from a fellow air line operator. He reached Washington after the meeting had been going on for two days.

An extension from Great Falls, Mont., to Lethridge, Canada, was under consideration, he said, although he was the only operator interested in it. Frank said he had frequently asked for this extension, but never got it, even after the meetings.

Frank said that he had been in Washington a month, anxious to appear before the committee. He added that after his contract had been canceled, Second Assistant Postmaster General Harllee Branch had suggested that he try to get heard before the committee.

Black adjourned the hearings until next week.

organization into a more compact organization called the "Dollfuss Regiment."

Dollfuss in Command.

This would put the chancellor in direct command of one closely knit volunteer army comparable to the Fascist Heimwehr under the command of Prince Ernst Rudiger von Starhemberg.

As Vienna continued quiet on the surface, the presence of Heimwehr troopers on the streets, with bayonets unsheathed once more, was taken as a significant straw in the wind.

Those members of the Vienna American colony who heard the rumor of anti-American sentiment did not take it seriously.

Americans believed the story probably originated in the resentment expressed in various quarters at the language of reports of the Austrian situation in some American papers.

A Heimwehr drive for new members had resulted so far in a mobilization of 65,000 armed Fascists throughout Austria, according to the newspaper of Emil Fey, vice chancellor and Heimwehr leader.

The regular army has 30,000 men, and the police and gendarmerie include 15,000.

Railroaad men at Graz who betrayed two Socialist leaders more than two weeks ago to police were reported found slain in a nearby wood. One of the Socialist chieftains was hanged February 19.

2,000 Wait Treason Trials.

Meanwhile, preparations went forward for bringing Socialist chieftains imprisoned here to trial for high treason. More than 2,000 await hearings.

The semiofficial Reichspost placed the number killed in the civil war at 297, including 23 women and children, and said unofficial estimates of more thaan 1,000 "were anti-Austrian propaganda."

Foreign office spokesmen ridiculed the anti-American rumor as "perfectly absurd," and expressed belief that such reports were spread by enemies of the government with the idea of discouraging travel to Austria.

No complaints have been received at the American consulate.

LaGuardia Attack Just Catnip To Gotham's City Hall Feline

New York, March 1 (AP).—An unseemly interest on the part of the City Hall cat in a scholarly denunciation of Mayor LaGuardia today swept the cloak of dignity from the Board of Aldermen.

The cat, which answers to the name of "Tammany," and is, in appearance, a small edition of the Tammany Tiger, was snoozing on a chair near the president's dais.

Alderman Edward Curley was on the floor, warming up to the attack. He quoted from the classics; he recited lines from the works of four distinguished poets.

Then the alderman raised his voice and began using such terms as "oligarchy" and "dictator."

Tammany sat bolt upright, gazed at Alderman Curley, and walked over to his desk.

"How do you do?" said Alderman Curley, waving the cat to be seated.

Tammany sat down, cocked his head and listened intently, but the rest of Curley's speech was drowned in laughter.

From the chair came an effort to restore order.

"The sergeant at arms," said President Bernard S. Deutsch, "had better escort the silent member to the back of the room."

Almost in a body the aldermen cried a protest, and Alderman Walter R. Hart moved that the privilege of the floor be extended to the City Hall cat.

The motion was carried and Alderman Curley went on with his speech, but all the fire was gone from his words, and he soon subsided.

"I'm mighty glad," he said later, "that I interested the City Hall cat. I hope I can hypnotize the mayor, too."

"Met" Revives Pastoral Opera

Lily Pons Sings Title Role of "Linda di Chamonix" in New York.

New York, March 1 (AP).—Grand Opera's version of the farm maiden and the mortgage—"Linda di Chamonix," was revived in splendrous setting today by the Metropolitan Opera.

Not since Adelina Patti trilled and trilled in this Donizetti opera has it been heard at the "Met." That was back in 1890.

The opera, based on French pastoral life in the late eighteenth century, has alawsy been an excellent one for coloratura sopranos. After Patti, there was Galli-Curci and Tetrazinni.

Today the soprano was petite Lily Pons, daughter of the farm, in the title role. With her in pricipal parts were Richard Crooks, American tenor, and Giuseppe de Luca.

Short Sellers in Air Stocks Will Be Given Senate Group

action, Mr. Whitney said the governing board wished to ascertain "whether any advance information was being improperly used." He added, however, that the report which would be given the Senate committee Monday would not draw any conclusion along this line.

Publication of List Asked.

Ferdinand Pecora, counsel to the committee, said he believed the findings of the exchange should be made a part of the committee's public record. He said he believed that "if that information has any significance, it should be made public—like everything else we have done here."

The six aviation stocks enumerated by Senator Kean as those embraced in the exchange's inquiry were United Aircraft Co., Aviation Corporation of America, North American Aviation, National Aviation, Douglas Aircraft and Wright Aeronautical.

Stocks of several of these companies had phenomenal price rises in the early part of January. In the last few days of the month the prices started to break until on February 10, with cancellation of the air-mail contracts, their prices dropped sharply.

Whitney Attacks U. S. Control.

Prior to bringing up the subject of the aviation stocks, Senator Kean was questioning Mr. Whitney regarding the provisions in the security exchange bill restricting short sales. Mr. Whitney said he interpreted the bill as outlawing all short sales and that he regarded the latter as a necessary function in security markets.

The day's hearing was rather dull and droning, devoted in large part to discussions of technical points in the bill, with one exception. That was a clash between Mr. Whitney and Mr. Pecora over the former's contention that the bill laid the foundation for the nationalization of all business and industry.

It was Mr. Whitney's contention, made Wednesday and reiterated yesterday, that section 18 of the bill went far beyond giving the Trade Commission power to regulate the exchanges, but also gave that body managerial authority over all corporations, irrespective of whether they engaged in interstate business.

"Fantastic Ghost," Says Pecora.

"I seriously and emphatically challenge your statement that this bill gives the commission authority of management over corporations," Mr. Pecora asserted, intimating the stock exchange authorities were using that argument to stir up hostility to the bill.

Roland Redmond, counsel to the exchange, stepped forward, asking if he might reply. He explained that Mr. Whitney's conclusion was based on his interpretation of the bill. He said the bill gave the Trade Commission authority "over the form and content of registration statements." He argued that under such power the commission might undertake supervision of a corporation's affairs.

"That is the most fantastic kind of ghost to conjure," retorted Mr. Pecora.

"I say that provision is a weapon which would allow control of corporations, a power that might be abused," asserted Mr. Redmond.

Market "Panic" Predicted.

"That is to say that when a man went on the Federal Trade Commission he would be devoid of all sense and mentality and would carry out his duties viciously," contended Mr. Pecora. "You can make that kind of argument about giving any discretionary power to a public official."

Mr. Roland said the provision gave the wide power he had mentioned but he was not saying it would be abused. Mr. Pecora said one might as well object to the pardoning power of the President on the ground that if the latter wished he could make a jail delivery.

Mr. Whitney said the exchange authorities believed adoption of the pending bill unchanged would bring on "a panic and a breakdown of our securities markets." He said the bill was framed by persons without knowledge of stock market practices while the views of the market experts were cast aside.

Mr. Pecora warmly interpolated that while he was "modest," he wished to claim "a knowledge of stock market practices, which, while technical, is rather thorough."

Continuing, Mr. Whitney said the bill would "hamstring and freeze the security markets." He said the alternative to the bill was to create a stock exchange authority, with representatives of the exchanges on it, with flexible powers so that "if disaster comes, as we predict, changes may be made without the necessity of another act of Congress."

Earlier in the day Frank Altschul, chairman of the New York exchange's listing committee, explained the rules under which stocks were listed and the precautions taken to prevent frauds. Representatives of the San Francisco, Philadelphia and Baltimore Stock Exchanges urged the bill be modified. They contended that it was too drastic and that especially the provision forbidding brokers to deal in stocks would be a hardship on brokers in cities outside of New York.

Theodore Gould, secretary of the Baltimore exchange, said that if brokers in that city were unable to engage in underwriting or dealing in stocks, they could not remain in business.

Snow or Not, Police Enforce Parking Laws

Brown Says Autoists Are Taking Advantage of Leniency.

Snow or no snow, strict enforcement of all parking regulations was ordered yesterday by Police Superintendent Ernest W. Brown.

Maj. Brown charged that District motorists "are taking advantage of police leniency."

In an order to precinct commanders, the police chief said:

"Complaints are being received at headquarters and it is observed that many motorists are disregarding traffic regulations—parking at an angle, parking abreast, parking overtime and leaving vehicles frequently in the lane of traffic so as to interfere with movement of other vehicles."

He also declared "cars are parked in excess of the 18-hour limit."

Although Maj. Brown indicated leniency would continue in "deserving cases," he ordered immediate and strict enforcement of all parking and traffic regulations.

Mayo Is Revealed As Escaped Convict

Chicago, March 1 (AP).—Fred Mayo, who hanged himself in a police cell after confessing his part in the attempted kidnaping of E. P. Adler, Davenport (Iowa) publisher, was said by police tonight to have been an escaped New Mexico convict.

Sergt. Thomas Kelly, acting head of the State's attorney's police, said he would not investigate the death of Mayo unless requested to do so by the family. Thomas P. Mayo, brother of Fred, gave out a statement at Gadsden, Ala., today, in which he expressed doubt that his brother had committed suicide.

"By making provisions for an exchange of the new type of bonds guaranteed as to principal as well as interest for those already issued, those mortgagees who have shown their willingness to cooperate with the Government's program by accepting the original bonds, will be placed on an equal footing with mortgagees who will hereafter obtain the fully guaranteed obligations proposed by this legislation.

"Out of the funds which may be made available as a result of the proposed guarantee of principal of these bonds, the Home Owners' Loan Corporation should be enabled to extend further assistance for the modernization of homes as well as for the making of repairs. Authority should also be given to the Home Owners' Loan Corporation to purchase bonds of the Federal Home Loan Banks, thus enabling the corporation to make funds available to those banks and to building and loan associations which are in need of financing in order to encourage private building."

Already bonds of the Farm Credit Administration have been guaranteed at the President's request, and little doubt was held that he would also get his wish in this case. Bills to accomplish his purposes were prepared on both sides of Congress and hearings are expected to be called soon by a House committee.

Bills Speeded.

In the House the Administration bill was introduced by Chairman Henry B. Steagall of the Banking and Currency Committee. Representative Michael K. Reilly (Democrat), Wisconsin, said he would call hearings before his sub-committee in a few days.

The proposal to broaden the lending power of the Home Owners Loan Corporation to enable loans for repairs and modernization was advocated by John H. Fahey, chairman, as another means to revive the building trades and employment. Funds for this purpose would be available from ready acceptance of the Government-indorsed bonds, which bear 4 per cent interest.

Thirsty Throng Liquor Stores; Prices Lower

Cheapest Whisky Is $1.19 a Pint; Most Supplies Are Scanty.

men, there were a number of women in the crowds. In one place, doing a cut-rate business, the throng extended out to the sidewalks. There was a crowd there when it opened at 8 a. m., the hour when bottle sale became legal.

Few quotations were available on wines and champagnes, because there was none available. Domestic wines sold as low as 89 cents a fifth. The price in Maryland is $1.10.

Dixie Belle gin was selling at one of the cheaper Washington stores at $1.19 a quart, as compared with $1.90 in Maryland. Hennessy brandy varied greatly. One store was charging $4.95 a bottle. In another, bottles with the same labels were selling at $3.85. Tom Hardy blended rye sold as low as $1.19 a pint in one store, and in another it was $2.85 a quart. The Maryland price is $1.20 a pint. Crab Orchard straight Bourbon whisky sold here as low as $1.19, as compared with $1.40 in Maryland.

Prices Quoted.

At one of the higher priced stores, the following prices were quoted on popular brands of blend whisky by the quart: Antique, $3.80; Golden Wedding, $3.60; Gibson, $3.60; D. L. Moore, $3.60; Greenbrier Bourbon, $3.40; Blackstone, $3.40 (another store was selling this brand for $2.65); Spring Garden, $4; Four Roses, $3.80; Paul Jones, $3.65; Tom Hardy, $3.85 (with a cut-rate store selling it $1.19 a pint). Crab Orchard straight Bourbon was selling anywhere from $2.35 to $3.85 a quart. Old Crow was selling at $3 a quart. Canadian Club whisky sold all the way from $3.95 to $4.25 a fifth.

Some of the liquor stores were selling bottles containing somewhat less than two ounces of blended whisky, at from 20 cents to 25 cents a bottle. This seemed to be a particularly popular item and thousands of bottles were sold to customers seeking a novel way of serving drinks. In one Fourteenth street store more customers were buying the little bottles, at 23 cents each, than anything else.

Cocktails at 25 Cents.

Cocktail prices ranged from 25 cents to 40 cents. Whisky by the drink was selling from 15 cents for the blended variety to 25 cents for bonded goods. Club prices and restaurant prices were lower than the old speakeasy rates. The Press Club was charging 25 cents for gin bucks, rye highballs and Manhattan and Martini cocktails. Straight drinks of blended liquor were as low as 20 cents and 40 cents was being charged for bonded rye and imported Scotch.

More liquor was pouring into the District hourly. Bonded goods were slow in arriving, but they were not in as great demand as the cheaper blended liquor. Customers in all the liquor stores were asking prices and seemed pleased to be able to carry home legal intoxicants. They appeared not too particular about the contents.

Shops in Connecticut avenue and other higher-priced neighborhoods were charging more than downtown places. For the most part their stock included only the better grades. They reported a steady business.

Representative Black (Democrat), New York, a member of the House District Committee, demanded an immediate hearing of all applicants for liquor licenses whose applications have been passed over. He declared that the Liquor Board had surrounded itself with red tape.

Huge Central Heating Plant Met Test of Cold Successfully

Warmed Score of Federal Buildings Last Month Without Trouble.

Burning coal at the rate of at least 230 tons each day, the Central Heating Plant, which serves about 20 Government buildings, met the onslaught of Washington's "coldest February" with success.

By coincidence, the new plant was fully "cut in" just as the cold wave struck and was able to supply steam at the rate of 300,000 pounds per hour during each day of the subnormal period. The output was reduced 20 per cent after office hours.

Steam now is being furnished to buildings as distantly removed from the plant as the old Pension Office Building, at Fifth and G streets northwest, at least a mile from the boilers. Three mains, two of 18-inch diameter and one of 12-inch diameter, carry the steam from the plant.

The interior of the huge building at Thirteenth and C streets northwest, presents the appearance of the engine room of a gigantic steamship. Even with all six furnaces in operation, however, comparative quiet prevails, making conversation on the "firing floor" easy and without effort.

Yesterday afternoon, at least 30 men were at work on the floor, but most were employes of firms engaged in construction work, the final phases of which have not been completed. At night, when the builders are out of the structure, only six men are required to handle the plant's operations.

Strangely enough, the extremely cold weather recently did not materially increase the heating system's consumption of coal. This is explained by the fact that the steam is supplied on a 24-hour basis, with the fuel requirements showing comparatively little variation from day to day, regardless of outdoor temperatures.

Court-Martial Of Maj. Ocker Amuses Judge

Sergeant Took Notes on Conversation, Says Officer on Stand.

Fort Sam Houston, Tex., March 1 (U.P.).—The court-martial of Maj. William C. Ocker, charged with calling his superior officer a "dumb" So-and-So, and otherwise speaking disparagingly of him, proceeded with military precision today.

Only the frequent smiles of Brig. Gen. Charles A. Howland, presiding, broke the solemnity of the scene. The jury of officers listened intently.

Gen. Howland interposed a word now and then when Maj. W. M. Krimball, judge advocate, and Charles Anderson, civilian defense counsel, clashed.

General Calls Halt.

"Steady!" boomed the general once when Maj. Krimball broke in as Anderson was putting a question.

The major stopped abruptly, bowed to his superior and waited for the question.

Maj. C. C. Johnston, flight surgean, who ordered Maj. Ocker grounded, and to whom Ocker, the Army's foremost inventor of aeronautical devices, spoke of Col. Henry A. Clagett, Kelly Field commandant, was again called to testify. Maj. Johnston reiterated preious testimony concernin gthe examination of Maj. Ocker and his subsequent grounding, and explained that while the conversation between him and the major was private, it was overheard by his orderly, Sergt. Daniel M. Towns. The sergeant, he said, took notes on the conversation.

Clagett Grounded Too.

"Sergt. Towns was not in the habit of taking down conversations in my private office, but in this case he considered it loyalty to me to do so," Maj. Johnston explained.

Col. Clagett was grounded several times by Maj. Johnston, the witness said, when he was ill and not in fit condition to fly.

Capt. E. L. Bergquist, recalled from Washington, told of examining Maj. Ocker.

"I wouldn't have passed Maj. Ocker on the matter of vision except on a waiver from the adjutant general," he declared.

Black Assails Liquor Board's License Policy

Member Says Dry Protests, Without Foundation Cause Heavy Loss.

Criticism of the District Alcoholic Beverage Control Board for holding up 60 applications for liquor licenses because of a single objection was voiced yesterday by Representative Loring Black (Democrat), of New York.

"I do not believe that Congress intended that a nonproperty owner residing in Georgetown could, by a single objection, delay action on the application of a respectable business man desiring a license for his store in Congress Heights," Representative Black said.

"But that is just what is happening at these hearings. An applicant's name is called and prohibitionist has only to rise and object and the application is passed over for future hearing.

"The Alcoholic Beverage Board should stop hamstringing these applicants and pampering the obstructionists.

"The board is violating the spirit if not the intent of the law, because it permits itself to be intimidated by an insignificant minority of die-hard prohibitionists, whose tactics of obstruction are costing 60-odd applicants thousands of dollars."

A personal dry, Representative Black has been a leader in the anti-prohibition group in Congress for a number of years.

Wagner Drafts Bill to Cancel Factory Unions

National Labor Board Puts Weirton Steel Case Up to Cummings.

cember the case was referred to the Department of Justice, but it was subsequently held up when the President met a demand of Weirton employes who visited him, by empowering the board to poll workers to determine if another election was wanted. The board sent representatives to make these inquiries and communicated privately, through its own members, with Weir himself.

The steelmaker, who has twice been in conference with President Roosevelt, bluntly told them that whether an election was held or not, he would refuse to receive the men elected, because his workers had already had their own election last September. The September poll, which Weir is alleged to have fostered by entertaining steel workers at a country club, was called a "farce" by board representatives.

Division within the Labor Board itself has resulted in delay. Leo Wolman, one of its members, has already resigned once and withdrawn his resignation at Senator Wagner's request. In yesterday's statement revealing the board's decision to ask the Department of Justice for "immediate action," it was stated that the decision was "Unanimous." Mr. Wolman, however, was absent from the meeting. Signers of the recommendation were as follows:

Senator Wagner, Walter C. Teagle, Pierre duPont, William Green, John L. Lewis, the Rev. Francis Haas and George L. Berry.

More Power Asked.

An early statement that the board had found that a "substantial number" of workers wanted the election, was later withdrawn.

Besides striking at "employer-dominated unions," which Senator Wagner declared made "a sham of equal bargaining," his bill calls for the creation of a permanent National Labor Board and a United States Conciliation Service in the Department of Labor.

Senate Agrees On Waterway, Navy Bill Votes

Controversial Measures Due Action Tuesday and March 15.

(Associated Press.)

The Senate made strides yesterday toward clearing its program of controversial legislation by agreeing to vote on the naval construction bill Tuesday and the St. Lawrence Waterways treaty March 14.

Visibly pleased, Senator Robinson, Democratic leader, gave the Senate a week-end recess and predicted Congress might still adjourn by May 15, despite the controversy certain to arise through President Roosevelt's decision to seek reciprocal tariff powers.

The Chief Executive's message yesterday asking for a Government guarantee on the $2,000,000,000 of home mortgage bonds did not complicate the Congressional outlook because it had been expected.

The sudden agreement of Administration leaders to fix a time to vote on the St. Lawrence treaty indicated confidence for ratification. But questioning of leaders failed to develop a single outright prediction of victory.

"It is simply time for a showdown," one of them said.

There was no doubt, however, over the outcome of the vote on the Navy bill Tuesday. Though the measure has been held up for several weeks by determined opposition, there are more than enough votes to put it through.

Civic Application Left at White House

West End Citizens Enlist President.

A delegation of leaders in the membership drive of the citizens associations yesterday left with Marvin H. McIntyre, secretary to President Roosevelt, an application for membership in the West End Citizens Association, whose boundaries include the White House.

President Roosevelt will sign and return it later. In the group were A. J. Driscoll, campaign chairman; James G. Yaden, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, and Robert D. Lyons, president of the West End Association.

Culbertson on Bridge

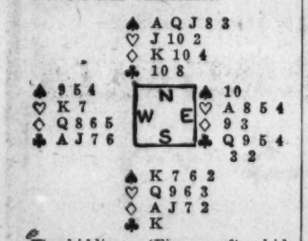
Correct Card Reading.

In considering the question of leads and plays at the bridge table there are certain types of plays, such as the King from King-small, that in some instances are termed "desperation leads," so named because, while they may easily sacrifice a trick, they offer what appears to be the only opportunity of defeating the contract. It does not necessarily follow, however, that every time a player leads a King from King-small the play is a desperation play. Sometimes the player can, by inference, place the Ace in his partner's hand or may know that if the Ace is not there nothing can prevent the opponents from making their contract.

An interesting example of a lead of this type which turned out well occured on the hand below, played in a bridge tournament at Crockford's Club, New York.

South, Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.



The bidding: (Figures after bids refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	1♠(1)	2♣(2)
3♠(3)	4♣	4♠(4)	Pass
Pass	Pass

1—A sound lead-directing bid in Rubber Bridge. In Duplicate, where the match-point system of scoring is used, even weaker hands are opened to avoid the possibility of getting a low score on a board.

2—In view of the length of the club suit, a sound nonvulnerable Overcall.

3—South's hand is very strong in support of his partner's bid.

4—A doubtful Rebid, as North knows that he has opened on greatly shaded values.

East opened the fourth-best club, and West won with the Ace. In studying the Dummy and reviewing the bidding West reasoned that his partner, who had bid on a Queen-high suit, must have held the heart Ace to justify any Overcall. He therefore laid down the heart King and followed with the remaining heart, which East won with the Ace. East now returned another heart, which West ruffed, thus defeating the contract.

Tomorrow's Hand.

If North opens the bidding with one heart and East, vulnerable, overcalls with one spade, which is doubled by South, what should North now do?

South, Dealer.
East and West vulnerable.

The hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute. 25c at drug stores. ©1931 C. M. Co.

Federal Birth Control Funds Are Predicted

Mrs. Sanger Leads Large Group at Committee Hearing.

"Before long we shall be asking a Federal appropriation for birth control caravans to go out to the mountains, mining districts and farms to reach those desiring birth-control information."

This was the prediction made by Mrs. Margaret Sanger, chairman of the National Committee on Federal Legislation for Birth Control, who led a long list of witnesses before a Senate judiciary sub-committee yesterday, urging approval of the Hastings birth control bill.

Mrs. Sanger deplored what she termed a "waste of woman power" and of child life at a tremendous cost to the community and the Nation, with 26,000,000 women deprived by law from seeking birth control information from recognized channels.

Birth control was offered to the committee as an aid to the unemployment problem solution by Dr. Sidney Goldstein, of the Free Synagogue, New York City.

Birth control violations by reputable physicians was likened to the "recent prohibition fiasco," by Dr. Prentiss Wilson, president of the District Medical Society.

Relief workers constantly are being confronted with the need for birth control information, Mrs. Kathryn Trent, Charleston, W. Va., social worker, told the committee. She said most of the families on relief rolls were those with six or more children.

Group Scores D. C. Vote Bill

Dupont Citizens Write to Glass Protesting Virginia Move.

Vigorous protest against a bill introduced in the Virginia Legislature, regarded as an initial step looking toward an amendment to the Constitution to grant District residents suffrage, was registered with Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, by the Dupont Circle Citizens Association yesterday.

In a letter addressed to Senator Glass the association called attention to the fact that it had gone on record in the past as opposing the granting of suffrage in the District.

"This is to inform you that the Dupont Circle Citizens Association represents a very considerable element of the population of the District," asserted the letter. "Further, this is to advise you that this association has on a number of occasions in the past gone on record as being unalterably opposed to the granting of suffrage in the District."

The communication urged Senator Glass to study the proposed legislation and make every effort to defeat "any attempt to establish general suffrage in the District of Columbia."

went over on the alkaline side!

At last the 14 year blight has officially come to an end. Everywhere happy parties gathered to help scotch it. Around town experts in "liquor control" were seen holding to the alkaline side... by mixing with White Rock. They knew White Rock is mildly alkaline. Tends to counteract the acidity of whatever it's mixed with. And it brings out a good flavor. Doesn't bury it.

One Out Of Five.

Most fundamental of all issues arising from the depression is the effect hard times are having upon our children. A striking illustration comes from Cleveland, where a speaker told the National Education Association's convention that 20 per cent of the high school students in an unnamed American city deny any immorality in stealing if the transgressor is without food. Ten years ago only 1 per cent of a similar group believed stealing proper under those circumstances.

The depression has come close to the children of our country, even as it has to their elders. Those of high school age, and younger, today know that something is wrong, somewhere. One of the speakers at the convention expressed himself as feeling that the coming generation is not content with a selfish acquisitiveness as the mainspring of social action. He asserted that our children show a tendency toward returning to the simple faith which our forebears are alleged to have held—the right of the common individual to earn his own living "without trampling on or being trampled by his neighbor."

Probably there is cause for congratulation, rather than regret, if young America is, today thinking along unconventional lines. Perhaps it is even well that the old moralities should be undergoing searching analysis by growing minds. The fires of idealism will soon enough be banked by the ashes of mature experience. And it is a fairly safe prediction that our generation will leave unsolved a supply of problems quite ample to temper the untried steel of those who will succeed us. The chief desideratum is that the desire to solve the problems of the future shall be present. The way will follow if the will is there.

Dern Good Sense.

After making allowance for the feud between the War Department and the House Military Affairs Committee, Secretary Dern's biting criticism of the McSwain bills is highly significant. We are accustomed to hearing from the Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Navy extensive requests for national defense equipment. No one would think of accusing Secretary Dern of pacifistic leanings. His devotion to the principle of adequate national defense and his position alike give unusual weight to his caustic indictment of plans to build a huge fleet of Army airplanes.

One of the McSwain bills provides for construction of 4,384 new Army planes. Secretary Dern puts this measure beyond the pale of serious consideration by declaring that it "would provide an air force so far beyond any sane estimate of our defensive needs, and so costly, that its passage could be construed by the world only as evidence either of ardent militarism or immediate war."

Some members of Congress appear to have lost all sense of proportion in considering our national defense needs. The erection of a great fleet of airplanes, far exceeding the desires of the Secretary of War, would be much worse than absurd. It would immediately stamp as hypocrisy all our carefully developed leadership in behalf of world peace and reasonable disarmament. Moreover, because of the rapid development of airplane design, the great fleet would soon be obsolete and taxpayers would have only the satisfaction of having indulged in another costly and irritating experiment.

Construction of Army air craft on so large a scale would also be a disturbing sequel to the cancellation of air-mail contracts, which is proving a destructive blow to commercial aviation. Whether the proposals in Congress are designed to equip the Army for permanent transportation of the mail or as a militaristic gesture, the criticism of Secretary Dern is equally effective.

Lindbergh, Senior.

The elder Lindbergh was a tough old Swede whose mind, they said, was as high in the air as ever his famous son flew his ship. They said his feet weren't on the ground and probably "they" were right. He was called a dreamer, and all sorts of things, and only a few who knew him well took him at all seriously. One of those rugged American radicals in politics, he took life pretty earnestly and learned much from books and more from the personal problems of his fellow men. In 1917 he wrote a book called "Why Is Your Country at War?" There are still some who are not sure the question has ever been satisfactorily answered.

His book was in the nature of a prophecy, foretelling a number of things which have since made unsavory disclosures. He talked about "the miscarriages of the existing system" and suggested various reforms which might repair "the evolutionary damage done by years of capitalistic control."

Sixteen years ago a Democratic Administration banned this book. Today another Democratic Administration is indulging in experimentation which makes many of Congressman Lindbergh's proposals seem relatively mild. Lindbergh, senior, was a lonely man who fought, with little success, for a decent hearing on matters of fundamental public import. The son, overnight, achieved the center of the world's adulation. Because of this, the father's forgotten book is now reprinted, making headlines in the Nation's press. His son's skill and luck at last have given a rostrum for the forgotten radical, too late for him to see his schemes an actuality, too late for him to know if his paper theories were sound or if, in his minor way, he was only a prophet of doom.

The Tariff Move.

Nearly a year ago—on March 22, 1933—it was announced that President Roosevelt would seek authority from Congress for the negotiation and promulgation of reciprocal tariff agreements. A bill to this end was drawn, but laid aside, prior to the convening of the World Economic Conference last June. Now the delayed legislation, in somewhat modified form, is finally to be introduced, following an executive message explaining its import.

One important aspect of the move will probably not be stressed in the President's message. This is the tacit admission, after a year of strenuous effort to lift ourselves by our bootstraps, that the domestic program alone will not secure recovery, no matter how dramatic its experimental qualities. There is more than a shade of chastening in this return to the international front which we abandoned so unceremoniously at London last summer.

The powers which the President is reported as about to ask from Congress are not excessive, though Republican hostility is assured on the grounds that they constitute an encroachment on the legislative function. This argument would perhaps have more weight if Congress had not so thoroughly demonstrated its habit of using tariff-making powers for sectional rather than national interests. What Senator McNary calls the "traditional treatment" of tariffs is a tattered standard for rallying a convincing opposition.

Without some such authority as the President proposes to request, little further headway can be expected in the series of reciprocal trade treaties on which the Department of State has been working for some months. The necessary give and take of negotiation cannot be submitted to Congress for itemized approval without ending all chance of successful bargaining. Nor is it possible for the Tariff Commission, bound by the cost of production clause, to abandon what is essentially a judicial function for purposes of negotiation. In those negotiations, of course, the investigations made by the commission should be of great value.

With our foreign trade shot to pieces, and showing indifferent indications of recovery, the action which the President proposes cannot be called either premature or subject to nonpartisan criticism, provided that the anticipated emergency-measure safeguards are maintained. It is the proper function of the Legislature to state a policy, leaving its execution to the Administration. Mr. Rainey states the position clearly when he points out that "this is a change in tariff policy, not in the tariff."

It is a change which may prove of great value in helping to reverse the trend whereby the volume of world trade has sunk to a pathetic trickle, with consequent growth of unemployment and resultant social difficulties everywhere.

All Tied Up.

Legislation dealing with Federal salaries and veterans' benefits has fallen into such a complicated tangle that the House has ordered reconsideration of the entire subject by its Appropriations Committee. The White House and Congressional leaders are naturally perturbed over the addition of $354,000,000 to the independent offices supply bill. Obviously, President Roosevelt is anxious to avert a situation that would call for a veto. House leaders are trying to uphold the Administration's policy, yet there is plenty of smoldering resentment among members of that body because the Senate has dealt more liberally than the House with the veterans.

Resentment against the Senate's spendthrift policy is, of course, fully justified. But that does not entirely explain the attitude of the House. If it were merely a question of rejecting the lavish benefits for veterans favored by the Senate, the lower chamber could have so instructed its delegates and the measure could have been sent to conference. But there are other irons in the fire which make it appear expedient to frame a new bill.

One of these irons is the Borah amendment, forbidding restoration of base salaries to officials drawing more than $6,000 per year. Of course, this is a direct slap at members of Congress who have hoped to boost their present $8,500 compensation back to the normal $10,000. House members are seeking a way to defeat this thrust without having to register their names on a roll call in favor of pay increases for themselves.

Another complicating factor is that the restoration of salaries is linked with the adjustment of veterans' benefits. There is no serious disagreement over the elimination of the pay cut, at least in part, for the rank and file of Government workers. The school teachers, police and firemen in the District and many groups of Federal employes throughout the country have refrained from organizing lobbies in behalf of their cause. On the other hand, the clamor for veterans' benefits is largely due to an effective lobby. Apparently, members of Congress find it difficult to give servants of the Government their just dues without simultaneously cultivating the favor of groups believed to wield a powerful political influence.

In spite of this intricate tangle of political forces, the real issue confronting Congress is clear. It is simply whether or not Federal funds shall be used to appease well-organized factions on the eve of an election. If the House is disposed to take a firm stand on this vital issue, it should have no difficulty in bringing the Senate into line. Meantime, the Government employes suffer.

Investigation Or Inquisition?

Congressional committees presumably summon witnesses to appear at hearings on important legislative proposals in order to benefit from a free expression of their views. The witness is entitled to a fair hearing without being treated as if he were a prisoner before the bar of justice. But the reception accorded the president of the New York Stock Exchange, Richard Whitney, when he testified before the Senate Banking and Currency Committee on Wednesday indicates that Ferdinand Pecora, counsel for the committee, finds the role of counsel for the prosecution more congenial than that of neutral interrogator.

From the ensuing barrage of sharp questions and reluctant or irritated answers, Mr. Pecora undoubtedly emerged as the victor in the battle of wits. A large and attentive audience was greatly diverted, too, by the interchange. Unfortunately, the counsel for the committee created the impression that it was his mission to defend the Fletcher-Rayburn bill to regulate stock exchanges, although even its framers have admitted it might be improved by revision.

On the other hand, the witness was maneuvered into defending the past record of the exchange and certain of its members against charges of manipulation. He was made to appear as a special pleader when he had come to offer positive recommendations for future elimination of manipulative practices. As a result the hearing was turned into an amusing public spectacle, and the major purpose was temporarily lost to sight.

The witness was there to give information and state his views. The committee members were there to be informed. Their expert counsel had been hired to see that pertinent facts were brought out and statements calculated to misinform or mislead the Senators deleted or exposed. That could have been done, however, without antagonizing witnesses or assuming that they are urging policies not in the public interest. Intelligent legislation dealing with complex and difficult subjects is not furthered by frightening, irritating or infuriating witnesses. If Mr. Pecora does not know the difference between investigation and inquisition, his usefulness—as something more than showman—is questionable.

Awakening In The House.

For a brief period on Wednesday the House of Representatives dropped the role of rubber stamp for Administration measures. By a vote of 275 to 110 it rejected a conference agreement that would have permitted the Government to operate a furniture plant at Reedsville, W. Va. Neither sentiment nor White House influence could alter the vigorous opposition of the House to this glaring instance of direct competition between the Government and private enterprise.

Several novel arguments for the Reedsville experiment were made during the course of the debate. Mrs. Greenway told the House: "Private industry, to my absolute knowledge, was begged to go down to Reedsville and make this experiment. They did not feel they were equipped financially to do so at this time." In other words, Congress was asked to undertake a business venture that no private firm considered practicable.

Representative Edmiston, of West Virginia, supported the project as a means of giving employment to 125 breadwinners of his home State. But when he was forced to estimate that West Virginia has about 50,000 destitute miners, 49,875 of whom would not benefit from this proposed experiment, he turned to another line of argument. Referring to the Reedsville project as Mrs. Roosevelt's idea, he made this chivalrous plea: "It seems to me, if for no other reason than for the courtesy extended to our First Lady of the land, if this be but a whim of hers, we should carry on and make this homestead project and this factory a success."

The House did well to brush aside these naive attempts to obscure the grave issue involved in the so-called Ludlow amendment. The definite stand against extension of the Government's competition with private industry tends to revive, in some measure, the prestige the House lost by passing vital Administration bills under gag rules with almost no debate and with drastic restrictions against amendments.

A spark of independent deliberation was also noticed last week when the House considered the emergency bill giving the Postoffice Department authority to use the Army Air Corps for carrying air mail. Apparently the membership is not impervious to public criticism of its recent defaults as a deliberative body.

Mile Posts

A Parade of the Past From the Files of The Post.

TWENTY YEARS AGO TODAY.

A TERRIFIC STORM, accompanied by an 80-mile gale, swept over the Northeastern section of the country, killing five persons in New York, causing wide havoc as it tied up all train traffic and tore down telephone and telegraph poles. A heavy snowfall complicated matters. Washington was lashed by a 61-mile gale.

VICE PRESIDENT MARSHALL told a New York Y. M. C. A. audience that his advice for a divorce cure was for all husbands to kiss their wives every day "as an evidence of good faith."

100 UNEMPLOYED men invaded a service at the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church. The pastor allowed them to stay and later fed them and gave them lodging for the night.

TEN YEARS AGO TODAY.

40 PERSONS were reported dead, 100 hurt, as a terrific blast at the Nixon (N. J.) Nitration Works leveled 40 houses in the town and 2 industrial plants. Soldiers were rushed to the rescue. The cause of the TNT explosion was undetermined. Horrible scenes were reported from the town, near New Brunswick, N. J.

THE SENATE voted to conduct an inquiry in the Department of Justice. The Wheeler resolution was passed, 66 to 1. Senator Brookhart was named chairman.

Washington's Prayer.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In the pew at St. Paul's Chapel in New York, where George Washington worshiped following his inauguration as President of the United States, there hangs framed his famous prayer, in which he earnestly asked Almighty God to keep the United States in His holy protection, and "that Thou wilt incline the hearts of its citizens to entertain a brotherly affection and love for one another and for their fellow-citizens of the United States—and, finally, that Thou wilt most graciously be pleased to dispose us all to do justice, to love mercy, and to demean ourselves with that charity, humility and pacific temper of mind, which were the characteristics of the Divine Author of our blessed religion, and without an humble imitation of whose example in these things we can never hope to be a happy Nation."

Thus, our first illustrious President started the marvelous progress of our Nation, not with any kind of a New Deal, but by praying God that our hearts might be attuned to the old square deal measured by the Golden Rule of Christ. It is impossible for any New Deal to be squarer than that. It is impossible for any yardsticks to improve on the Golden Rule. And it is not likely that any birch rod can signify any brotherly love or affection between citizens. And recent history has demonstrated that the birch rod of the New Dealers may not be wielded in any "pacific temper of mind," but rather in hasty political partisanship, and in unjust and relentless crack-downs on fellow-citizens.

George Washington was not only the "father of his country" in the sense that he brought it into existence as a Nation, but he always took a fatherly interest in the welfare of all his brother citizens of all classes and sections, and in every legitimate business and industry—striving his utmost that not merely some, but all should be prosperous, and that both labor and capital should enjoy the fruits of toil and of investments. He encouraged those who could produce and be fruitful, and even if they became wealthy, they were given no strait-jacket, handcuffs or birch rod. He assured them justice and protection, and not a redistribution of their wealth.

American business and industry is like the goose that could lay golden eggs, except when she was sick or worried. Thrashing with the birch rod will not cure the sickness or speed up the golden egg production. American business, in order to get well set, lay down more jobs and pay more dividends, must be in the "pacific temper of mind" that Washington prayed for. It should not be unnecessarily disturbed and scared by the dirt scratchers, the cock fighters and the ax grinders of politics.

Transportation Facilities.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Washington public is justly aroused at the miserable street car and bus service they are receiving. During the cold weather patrons suffered great discomfort in cold street cars, with absolutely no heat, and were obliged to sit so long in these "refrigerators" that life and health were endangered. It took 35 minutes to ride from Kennedy-Warren Apartments to Fourteenth and H streets, with no snow to hold up the service. What can be done? Working people can not pay car fare, then hail a taxi, fearing to be late at work. The bus service is equally bad, coming 20 minutes to half an hour apart. Someone is making money at the discomfort of the public! What can the people do?

No small city in America has as poor or as out-of-date car service as our own National Capital.

CITIZEN.
Washington, Feb. 14.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have been riding on the Mount Pleasant car line for almost 20 years, which qualifies me to express an opinion as to its inadequacy. It maintains no schedules, the number of cars are wholly inadequate, especially in the mornings and evenings; the cars are never properly ventilated, and the way in which passengers are packed in the cars is positively indecent and an outrage, especially to the women. It was expected and promised that the service would be improved after the merger, but it has grown worse steadily.

The responsibility rest entirely upon the Public Utilities Commission of the District Columbia, because the law clothes it with ample authority. The commission has grossly failed and neglected to discharge its duties to the public. The commission should be promptly removed for incompetency and neglect of duty, and the demand for its removal is hereby made in behalf of an outraged and long suffering public.

The following are the pertinent provisions of the law, which also gives the commission ample power to enforce its orders:

"That every street railroad company or corporation owning, controlling, leasing or operating one or more street railroads within the District of Columbia shall, on each and all of its railroads, supply and operate a sufficient number of cars, clean, sanitary, in good repair, with proper and safe power, equipment, appliances and service, comfortable and convenient, and so operate the same as to give expeditious passage, not to exceed 15 miles per hour within the city limits, or 20 miles per hour in the suburbs, to all persons desirous of the use of said cars, without crowding said cars."

If the public can not get redress from the commission or by voluntary action of the company, application should be made to the Congress for a law empowering the District Commissioners to condemn the street car lines in the city and take them over at a fair valuation, and operate them for the benefit of the people of the District. If not operated for profit, and they should not be so operated, they can be run on at least a self-sustaining basis at a 5-cent fare, as a municipal utility.

The law authorizing acquisition of the properties should also empower the District government to borrow the purchase price on long term bonds. It is believed that the income from the lines, if operated as suggested, would produce income sufficient to retire the bonds.

"Back to the Land."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Please accept our thanks for putting Robert Quillen back in The Post. We missed him every day he was out.

We desire to commend also the letter of Emmett W. Taylor on, "Back to the Land." We doubt whether you have had a letter in months which is as practical and important as this one. Mr. Taylor and you and others should keep on agitating this question until action is brought about and the dream fulfilled. W. B. WITHERSPOON.

Anti-Rabic Serums.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I was most interested to read Mrs. Farrell's letter in the Feb. 17 issue of your paper on the extremely rare occurrence of rabies. I wish to uphold and corroborate all that Mrs. Farrell claims and add my findings. Says Dr. Harry Ungerer, veterinarian of 50 years' experience in Westfield, N. J.: "I never encountered a rabid dog—running fits and convulsions are often called rabies." T. D. Dillon, proprietor of Dingle Valley Kennels, Palisades, N. J., declares: "I have never seen a case of rabies until serums were put into use."

Says Wilbur J. Murphy, M. D., of New York City: "Who can correctly judge the serious injury that must follow such inoculation? Delicate organs, like the kidneys and heart, must experience the poisonous effects of these noxious agents; but far more serious is the possibility that a terrible toxic material—prepared in the laboratory in these 'control animals'—will produce disease when injected into dogs to prevent disease."

And what of the torture endured by these "control animals"? These desperate victims, in the merciless hands of the serum manufacturers and vivisectors, are stolen pets and poor lost animals picked up by the pound. In the making of anti-rabic serum, all infective injections are given through the eye. To quote Dr. Murphy: "To the sufferings of dogs so mistreated no anesthesia can give relief, and I feel for their pathetic woe because I know how keen the pain and how great the misery—so great as to be impossible to describe. We must protest against such wanton cruelty, and unmask barbarity in the name of research work."

As Others See It

Disaster Ahead.

It is a rare day that passes without its prediction of disaster to come. There are the disasters expected to occur tomorrow or next year. But it is not necessary so to limit gloomy glances into the future. It is quite customary to picture the exhaustion of natural resources a century or two hence with dire consequences to the hunmanity of that day. People of delicate sensibilities may shudder as they contemplate what may be in store for their great-grandchildren.

Nor is it necessary to confine the view of the future to a few centuries. Years may be numbered in thousands instead of in hundreds. Why not the longer look? A French scientist does not hesitate to cast his eyes down the vista of ages to come. He skips lightly, if not cheerfully, over 20,000 years. Then, he says, the world's food supply will not be adequate to its population. This will be due to the using up of all the natural phosphates from which fertilizers are made.

They who have tears to shed for suffering humanity in the year A. D. 21934 prepare to shed them now. They who, in the twentieth century, read the thesis of Thomas Robert Malthus as embodied in his "Essay on Population" may find in his prediction of Dr. Camille Matignon, famous French chemist, evidence that Malthus was right in his main contention. The only trouble was that he pictured his theory as proved about 20,000 years too early. He wrote of the tendency of population to increase faster than the means of substance. The French chemist pictures a comparable condition. What's a mere matter of 20,000 years between an economist and a scientist? Mr. Matignon vindicates Malthus.

The Post Impressionist

Dust For A Biography

Postoffice, Friday.

Several volumes about a beloved monarch are in the making for June publication. Washington's Charlotte Kellogg should write one, Toledo's Brand Whitlock another. Both these authors are welcome to our little contribution.

• • • •

Through a 1917 winter-dawn, we were driving a more or less wheeled ark out of Belgian G. H. Q. at La Panne, headed for the Front Line in a hurry. Unfortunately, the Road-Control had not thought speed vital; some single-track mind commanded that thoroughfare: you were to return by another route, if ever. And enemy shells wholeheartedly cooperated with the Flemish engineers' designs.

Thus, after we'd idled along for 30 minutes we became accustomed to bashing our skull against the tiller and bruising our nose on the binnacle. What we did not become accustomed to was the impeding of our progress by other craft; like Noah's, ours had a flood to itself, until——

Something had swung a car right across our course. Two brown beings were on their knees in the mud, trying to doctor what appeared to be gangrene of the axles.

• • • •

You could see nothing of those beings except their backs. They looked like gigantic ants out of the moon about which H. G. Wells wrote when he wrote for entertainment. But the car was like a fallen meteorite.

We descended and said exactly what we thought. If the derelict wasn't immediately removed, we would kick it out ourselves.

Then the chief mechanic rose, wiping his muddy hands on his muddy breeches. The mud on his face he left there.

"I shall do my best possible," he said humbly.

It was thereupon that we recognized Albert of the Belgians.

• • • •

Of course this story has been told about other kings:

There was the Yankee tourist who ordered Denmark's monarch to guide him over Elsinore. But we never believed that one.

Then there's the 1932 one about Boris of Bulgaria laughingly identifying himself to a doubting peasant by his likeness on a goldpiece. But we incline to the opinion that Boris didn't have a goldpiece in 1932 and that, if he had, he'd have been too wise to risk highway robbery.

In favor of the present version, we can at least affirm its truth.

• • • •

And did not assiduous obituary-writers forget one of Albert's American visits? Our treacherous memory asserts that he first came to this country while heir-apparent. Concerning his activities in Washington upon that journey we have no recollecton, but in Philadelphia he was a guest, with John Philip Sousa, of one of those peculiarly Philadelphian dinner associations which discover a hospitable humor in inviting a visitor to speak and then not letting him do it. This guest, however, the Five O'Clock Club respected.

• • • •

King Albert was a motion-picture addict; his personal aide hated nothing so much as the cinema. That was all right for the aide while at home: those Belgians with more power than their King thought it undignified for him to attend too many cinemas in Brussels. But when Albert, always with his aide, paid one of his frequent visits to Paris, the monarch did nothing much except attend the movies.

"He is at the nearest as soon as it opens in the morning," the aide complained to an American friend. "As soon as that show is over, he moves to the next, and so on, often, till after the last night-show, with scarcely time to eat.

"He makes me buy ordinary tickets, because he prefers sitting among ordinary spectators—and frequently he gathers crowds. One wet afternoon, he was recognized, although hiding his face from his admirers by holding his umbrella very low. He thought he could escape on foot, and I, passing to our car, lost him. But I had only to search for him at the next theater."

• • • •

When Hugh S. Gibson was our Ambassador to Belgium, he told of entering King Albert's study, to take the King to address some delegation of traveling American Rotarians. His Worthwhile Majesty—who spoke fluent English, but had trouble with its initial "R's"—turned to the canary that he kept, in its cage, on his otherwise businesslike desk. The canary was chanting lustily.

"Ah, leetle birdie," King Albert apostrophized, "you can afford to sing—you—for you do not 'ave to say an uffle word like"—and, with splendid effort, the monarch finally rolled it out—"R-r-r-r-grotary!"

SOLACE FOR STUTTERERS.

At the recent annual meeting in New York of the American Society for the Study of Disorders of Speech, Dr. Robert West, professor of speech at the University of Wisconsin, provoked much "argument about it" by his declaration that stuttering is really a perfectly natural phenomenon and should by no means be considered an abnormality, says the Medical Record. He holds that in stuttering the mechanism of speech has not evolved sufficiently to function properly. A stutterer should not be made to feel that he is sick, or even nervous. He simply needs coaching—coaching in conversation, in social approach and poise, in loss of self-consciousness. To make him despise himself as a social misfit or to pity himself as a pathological case is the worst kind of maltreatment.

BARGERON.

WELL, sir, I'll bet when the historians come to this episode of us they will have pause. It so happened that the day prohibition peal came to us, that is to say, those of us in the Nation's Capital, we had Labor, Industry and Consumer at each other's neck. Never has such a diversity of interest been in our midst. For two days they had been shouting epithets, whipping incriminations upon one another and in general presenting what our leader, Crack-Down Johnson, of the NRA, called the field day for the people.

On this day that repeal came to us they were up and at it early, figuring that their time was getting short and that it behooved every one of them to grab the other fellow's neck and not let go.

So it was up until noon, this first day that repeal came amongst us. They were meeting, Labor, Industry and Miss Consumer, at our leading hotels, at the Mayflower and the Willard. Of a sudden the arbiter of our destinies, the NRA, called a halt in the battle royal for luncheon.

* * * *

Mr. Industry walked over to Mr. Labor in his polished way, his perfumed handkerchief mopping his brow.

"What do you say," he asked, "that we have a cocktail or so and then lunch?"

"You mean," replied Mr. Labor, "that we should partake of those new-fangled things which this day the hotel offers us. It's not a bad idea."

"Whatcher say," pursued Mr. Industry suavely, "that we ask Miss Consumer to join us. She's a very attractive girl."

So it came about that the three of them sat down together at one of those intimate tables which our hostelries have installed.

When the waiter came with the wine, liquer, cocktail and whisky list, Mr. Industry said with that air of having been around: "I'll take a Martini." Mr. Labor said: "I'm used to taking my gin straight." Mr. Industry, with a patronizing gesture, countered: "Oh, my dear man, not that right here in the hotel. It is a Martini you want."

Up then spoke Miss Consumer.

"I don't know that I want anything. After all, I get sort of giddy when I drink."

* * * *

This served to bring the two men together for the first time in their lives. They were now in a common cause.

"Don't be silly," they chorused, "we'll take care of you."

And widening her great big clear blue eyes, she said: "I wonder."

It was amazing then how Mr. Industry and Mr. Labor vied with one another in solicitude for her. Yet she seemed to know very well how to take care of herself.

"I think," she said, turning to Mr. Labor, "that you all have been perfectly terrible to me. Every time I open my mouth you two men laugh. Sometimes I feel so lost in your great strength!"

"Now, ladee," returned Mr. Labor (several more cocktails had been served by now), "I don't want you to feel that way toward me at all. The truth is that I am misunderstood. I am misunderstood at home."

"Oooh, Mr. Labor!" Miss Consumer cooed. "You have a wicked heart."

At this the blood coursed warmer in Mr. Labor's body than it had in many years."

"Well," he admitted, "I don't know. Maybe—er—er—maybe I have."

* * * *

Then Miss Consumer turned to Mr. Industry.

"Oh, Mr. Industry," she said, "Mr. Labor over here is the nicest man. He is so understanding. But do you know, Mr. Industry, I am afraid of you. I think you are dangerous. Do you know what, Mr. Industry, I believe you have a wicked heart."

"Well, well, now, Miss Consumer, that is not it at all. But I do think you are fascinating. Miss Consumer, I like your expression. Your eyes! Ah, Miss Consumer, they are beautiful——"

When I left Labor and Industry had their arms around Miss Consumer and the three were singing "Sweet Adeline."

What a fine way for Crack-Down's show to turn out.

Bilbo Waits

Senate Candidacy Will Be Made From Home.

Theo G. Bilbo, former Governor of Mississippi, ended his services with the Farm Administration yesterday, but delayed announcing his candidacy for the United States Senate in opposition to Senator Stephens, the Associated Press reported.

Bilbo, who since last June has served as a clipper and recorder of Farm Administration publicity, was indefinite about his future plans, but said he would make an announcement later in Mississippi. Asked today if he was ready to announce his candidacy for the Senate, Bilbo said:

"No, not yet. That will come after I get back home. You will hear the racket from the field."

Eleven Stubborn Men Don't Split a Jury

By Robert Quillen

The beginning of every cure is the diagnosis.

The farmer whose soil is poor can not grow rich, but even the limited success within his reach will be denied him until he recognizes the soil's poverty and no longer attempts to grow crops that it can not support.

When young people first attempt to write a story, they almost invariably set the stage in some locality far removed from their own experience.

Their characters are highly colored portraits of unusual people they have met in other stories—never the flesh and blood people they see and hear in their own environment.

Asked why they search so far to get such unhappy results, they will answer: "Because nothing ever happens here and these people never do anything."

Yet a Julia Peterkin, living on a lonely plantation 10 miles from a remote village, finds in her own back yard abundant material for novels that bring her riches and fame.

The success of the story, as you see, does not result from its romantic setting or heroic characters, but always from some quality possessed by the author.

Here, then, is the cornerstone of contentment's philosophy.

Discontent pretends to be dissatisfaction with a place or associates or conditions. But the cause of it is nearer home.

If you are a stranger to contentment, others are made to bear the blame. "I could be happy," you say, "if I could get away from this dull place, escape these disagreeable people and find more pleasant conditions.

But you can't get away from yourself.

All resorts seem dreadful places to the invalid who travels from one to another in vain search for health. And 9 times out of 10 some quality or the lack of some quality in the individual himself makes his environment seem dull and his neighbors disagreeable.

The kingdom of heaven is within you and there is no hope of finding it anywhere else.

The fault isn't in the soup if it tastes wrong to only one of many diners.

Sword of Custer, Fine Toledo Blade, Presented Smithsonian

War Hero's Widow's Will Gives Famed Weapon to Institution.

Presentation to the Smithsonian Institution of the sabre once owned and used by Maj. Gen. George A. Custer, made in accordance with the terms of the will of the famous fighter's widow, which has just been probated, places a unique weapon in the Institution's possession.

The blade, used by Custer during the Civil War, is one of the largest in the Institution's collection of swords and sabres, which includes more than 1,000 items. It is a heavy two-edged blade, of the Spanish cavalry type, and has three narrow grooves along each side.

On the obverse, near the hilt, is engraved the Spanish legend, "No me saques sin raizon; No me enbaines sin honor." The grip is covered with russet leather and wound with brass wire. The pommel is covered with a heavy helmet-shaped piece of brass, the lower part of which is decorated with a laurel spray. The guard is formed of a heavy bronze strip with three circular branches.

The Custer sword, which is a true Toledo blade, has previously been on exhibition at the National Museum as a loan by the famous soldier's widow.

The collection of American swords now in the institution's possession, with loaned exhibits in addition, forms the largest group of such swords gathered at any one place. Not all of the collection is on exhibition, those which are of interest solely from the standpoint of specimens of the sword-makers' art and having no historical interest now being in storage.

The outstanding sword in the collection, of course, is the one which was carried by George Washington during the Revolutionary War. It was received by Washington's nephew, Samuel Washington, under terms of the first President's will, which included the injunction that it, and other swords so bequeathed, were not ever to be unsheathed 'for the purpose of shedding blood, except it be for self-defense, or in defense of their country and its rights."

President Ends U. S. Job Board

Commerce Department to Take Over Functions.

President Roosevelt yesterday notified Congress by message that he had signed an Executive order establishing in the Department of Commerce a Federal employment stabilization office and transferring to it "the functions, personnel, records and property of the Federal employment stabilization board."

The order abolishes the board, which was composed of the Secretaries of Commerce, Treasury and Agriculture, but continues its function within the Commerce Department.

The President's action was in accordance with reorganization authority granted him at the last session by Congress. The order automatically becomes law after 60 days, if not disapproved.

Mitchell Urges End to Reign Of Pendergast

Calls on G. O. P. to Aid Fight on Machine in Kansas City.

Ewing Y. Mitchell, Assistant Secretary of Commerce and a leading Roosevelt Democrat of Missouri, has appealed to Republican voters in Kansas City to join hands with New Deal Democrats and unseat the Pendergast Democratic machine in that city's mayoralty fight now in full heat.

Mr. Mitchell issued his call in the form of a newspaper interview given at Kansas City, copies of which also were made public at his office in the Department of Commerce here.

The Democratic organization headed by Tom J. Pendergast, one of the last of the old-type political bosses, has been firmly in the saddle in Kansas City for years with former Senator James A. Reed as a close ally. Mitchell and the "Young Democrats" who are strongly pro-Roosevelt, have declared war on Pendergast and are backing a fusion candidate for mayor, Dr. A. Ross Hill, former head of the University of Missouri.

Charges Corruption.

Mitchell's call to arms against the Pendergast faction came just a few days after Postmaster General James A. Farley issued a statement saying the Democratic National committee would keep hands off of Congressional, State and municipal primary contests, a move to relieve the Administration of participating in embarrassing factional fights within the party. Mitchell said he was speaking for himself alone.

The Kansas City primary is Tuesday and the election March 27.

"Nowhere in this country has there been a bolder, more arrogant, ruthless and corrupt municipal government than that provided Kansas City by the Pendergast machine," Mitchell said.

Hit by Shannon.

"If there is one thing the President's New Deal has demonstrated more clearly than others, it is that graft, corruption and racketeering in this country must cease," Mitchell said, adding that "if Dr. Hill becomes mayor, he will give to Kansas City the same sort of New Deal that President Roosevelt now is giving to the country."

Recently Pendergast described his opponents as "just a lot of nice boys and girls who have joined hands with sorehead Republicans."

Representative Joseph Shannon (Democrat), who represents the Kansas City District in Congress, said Mitchell's charges were false and misleading.

Stern Rule Aim At Order in Saar

Arms Regulation Stricter as Plebiscite Nears.

Geneva, March 1 (AP).—Stringent measures to maintain order in the Saar territory, pending next year's plebiscite, were disclosed today in a report of the governing commission.

While the League of Nations, the Saar's guardian, is struggling with the problem of whether the plebiscite will demand international troops to insure freedom of balloting, the commission announced increased penalties for improper uses of weapons.

Military marches will be prohibited and wearing of uniforms by Nazi or other associations. The territory will vote whether to go under French or German jurisdiction or remain under the wing of the league.

U.S. Asks Aluminum Strikers to Return

3,700 Take Holiday Asking Better Conditions.

New Kensington, Pa., March 1 (AP).—The 3,700 employes of the Aluminum Co. of America out on a "holiday" were directed by the Regional Labor Board today to go back to work pending negotiation of their compiaints.

Asking changes in wage scales and working conditions, hundreds of workers at New Kensington, Arnold and Logans Ferry remained away from their jobs and peacefully picketed plants.

Officials of the Aluminum Union called a mass meeting to act on the labor board order. A. C. Jewett, secretary of the regional board, predicted they will be at work in a day or two.

Nye Demands Dakota Relief Prosecution

Control Is Taken From Gov. Langer; Graft Is Charged.

A demand for prosecution of North Dakota relief officials for purportedly making political levies on relief employes was made by Senator Nye (Republican), North Dakota, following withdrawal of control of relief funds from Gov. William Langer.

"Let the ax fall where it will," Senator Nye declared in the Senate yesterday, "even though it shall involve indictment and trial of one rewarded by election to so high an office as that of Governor of the State I love and happily call home."

Federal Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins yesterday wired Gov. Langer that "information obtained by this administration indicates that political contributions were collected from employes of the relief administration in North Dakota."

Charges Political Use.

Declaring he had asked Judge A. M. Christiansen to act as administrator of relief and civil works in North Dakota, Mr. Hopkins said in his telegram to the North Dakota Governor that it was "apparent" that the "contributions were used for your political purposes."

Senator Nye said he was "very sorry to have to say that in my State the itch for politicatl funds has gone so far that it finds men allegedly demanding toll of even those who accomplish employment through funds afforded by the Federal Government through agencies like those of emergency relief and public works."

"This practice is directly contrary to the policy of this Administration and will not be tolerated or permitted."

Relief Control Taken.

"Our information indicates that the relief commission itself took immediate steps to discontinue this practice as soon as it was discovered.

"Pursuant to section 3, paragraph B, Federal Emergency Relief Administration act of 1933, the administrator is herewith assuming control of the administration of relief in the State of North Dakota. I have asked Judge A. M. Christiansen to act as the administrator of relief and of civil works in North Dakota, effective at once."

Hopkins announced that since he took office, grants aggregating $3,612,520 have been made to North Dakota for relief. North Dakota becomes the fourth State in which the Federal Government has taken over control of relief funds. Georgia, Kentucky and Oklahoma previously have been put in this status.

Daily Talk About Books and Authors.

Respectable Temptations.

In one of his novels, Mr. Howells said that the devil often tempts us, not in what is called the lowest side of our nature, but in the highest.

Three famous works, written in the nineteenth century by three contemporary men of genius, seem to me to illustrate this with striking clearness.

Nathaniel Hawthorne, though very far from being a prig, was never in the slighest danger of going to hell along the crowded highway filled with the victims of drink and sensuality; his nature and self-respect made him immune. But his very fastidiousness, and what he himself called his "unconquerable reserve" made him in danger of a certain coldness of mind, a lack of human sympathy. He knew this perhaps better than any one else, for he was an admirable diagnostician; hence he wrote a short story, "Ethan Brand," where a man hunted all over the world to find the unpardonable sin. And at long last he discovered that he need not have travelled at all, for it was in himself. It was the development of the intellect at the expense of the heart.

I have no doubt that he wrote the book to save his own soul.

Tennyson, whose life was flawlessly respectable, wrote a poem called "The Palace of Art." Here an individual went in for the highest possible self-culture, represented in the poem by the construction of a magnificent palace, embellished with the most splendid adornments. And when it was all finished, and ready for occupation, he saw the mortal danger. He went into a humble cottage, and tried to cultivate human associations.

When Browning was 22 years old he wrote a long philosophical poem, "Paracelsus," in which the hero set out to attain all knowledge, despising the work of his predecessors and of his contemporaries. He thought he wanted knowledge, but what he really wanted was something quite different—Fame. He went to pieces, and on his deathbed learned the truth, although he was no nearer to the knowledge he had sought.

Perhaps this is what the Master meant, where, after mentioning one who was greatest, he said that the least in the Kingdom of Heaven was greater than he.

The proposal, already defeated in the Senate, will be taken up in the House March 12.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips.

A COLUMNIST'S OTHER SELF.

(After the manner of a man and his separate personality, as portrayed in Eugene O'Neill's latest play, "Days Without End.")

The columnist has just sat down at his desk and is about to look through the newspapers. Directly behind him sits his Evil Spirit or "Stooge."

Columnist—Well, now to bat out another breezy, refreshing column.

Stooge—Breezy my eye! You can't write a breezy column, you poor sap, and you know it. Why don't you dig up one of the two good things you ever did in your life and use it "Reprinted by Request?"

Columnist (ignoring the kibitzing)—I'll glance through these papers, grab off an idea and make it a wow. I feel unusually amusing this morning.

Stooge (with a hoarse laugh)—Glance nothing! You'll do what they all do . . . look through the papers for three or four hours in a sort of stupor and then write some drivel about your private affairs. And you don't feel amusing at all. You feel positively stupid.

* * * *

Columnist (a little uneasily)—I have a positive hunch I'm going to do something very brilliant today.

Stooge—The wish is father to the hunch. You'd better rewrite that old raven parody on the Blue Eagle.

Columnist—The papers are strangely barren today. There's nothing interesting in them.

Stooge—You're barren; the papers are all right. There's an item there about a woman shooting her husband because he trumped her ace in bridge.

Columnist—That's been done before. I wouldn't want to repeat myself.

Stooge—The deuce you wouldn't! Don't be a hypocrite.

* * * *

Columnist—I wish I could shake off this heaviness and get going. What was that swell idea that I had in the subway yesterday?

Stooge—You had no swell idea in the subway; it was the elevated. And it was awful. Go ahead and use an old column with the reprinted-by-request dodge.

Columnist (yawning)—I think I'll do a column on the idea of the Colonial fathers running America through three-initial organizations like the NRA, the CWA, &c. It could be pretty funny.

Stooge—You'd bungle it. You're not in the mood. Go see a movie. Hey, listen!

Columnist—What?

Stooge—Use a reprinted-by-request column.

Columnist—You mean a previously used column marked, "Reprinted by Request?"

Stooge—You heard me.

Columnist—Okay, Mr. Hyde.

(He digs up a column and marks it "Reprinted by Request.")

To encourage intelligent study of today's history-making events, The Washington Post and four great local centers of learning—American, Georgetown and Howard Universities, and the Catholic University of America—are cooperating in The Washington Post Scholarship Competition, which calls for preliminary essays by high school seniors on governmental topics, and which carries major awards of five four-year tuition scholarships at the sponsoring universities.

For the benefit of the hundreds of students already enrolled in this competition, The Post is publishing a series of articles, of which the following is the tenth, contributed by professors at these four universities.

Dr. Charles H. Wesley, professor of history, Howard University, offers the fourth group in this series concerning the pros and cons of some of the stipulated topics on civic problems.

The Greatest Issue in American History Since the Civil War.

By Dr. Charles H. Wesley.

The use of the phrase "greatest issue" raises a question instantly in the mind of one who would select this subject. The superlative, "the greatest," is a relative term which to an extent depends upon the opinion of the writer. From one point of view, it may seem to be one factor which is "the greatest," and from another point of view it may be another factor. The selection of this subject would then place upon a writer the necessity of defending his choice.

During the Presidential administrations and the political contests since the Civil War, there were certain issues which were leading ones in the minds of American citizens. Such questions as the rise of combinations of wealth and industry, the extension and control of railways, the currency problems, the problems of minorities, labor organization, the taxation of incomes, urban development, the changing economic order and its relations to the Government on the one hand and the people on the other, have been among the many problems which America has faced since the Civil War.

Tariff Most Continuous.

The most continuous and foremost issue, however, was the tariff. It was the first issue in every political campaign and at times it was called the "burning issue." The Democratic and the Republican parties were continuously divided over the issue. The campaign speeches of the leaders of political parties and the platforms of the two major parties turned toward the tariff.

Other problems may have been more real, but the tariff was most prominent.

In spite of all of the public discussion and the headlines in the daily newspapers, there were only seven distinctive revisions of the tariff between 1870 and the close of President Wilson's second Administration.

Agitation and legislation seemed to be able to settle nothing definitely with reference to the tariff. One party placed the duties at the highest point for the protection of industry, and the other party reduced it and then each sought to reach a middle ground, often disagreeing among themselves. A Tariff Commission was established in President Taft's Administration and a new commission was appointed in 1916 by President Wilson, and the membership of the commission was increased under President Hoover.

Became International.

The discussions of the Underwood-Simmons tariff of 1913, the Fordney-McCumber tariff of 1922 and the Hawley-Smoot tariff of 1930 kept the issue before the public in the period following the World War. A protest from more than 1,000 economists in 179 colleges and universities urged the President to veto the measure, which he did not do, and the measure became a law. In 1932 the tariff seemed to have become an international issue, when it became known that more than 20 nations had revised their customs rates in reaction against American rates, and some of the revisions were made with the intention of bringing the United States to an abandonment of its higher duties. From a domestic issue, the tariff had become an international one.

Division winners, to be announced by April 15, will subsequently compete in university campus finals between May 1 and 15, for the tuition scholarships offered by cooperating universities. Veterans Back Adminstration

New Association Reaffirms Trust in President's Program.

The American Veterans' Association, new organization of ex-service men, yesterday reaffirmed its support of President Roosevelt's compensation policy and its opposition to the American Legion program adopted by the Senate, United Press reports.

"This organization is in favor of increased benefits for actual service-connected injured and service-connected widows," said Harry H. Semmes, National vice commander. "It is not in favor of the restoration of all presumptive cases of service disability.

"It believes that the special boards created by the President for examining these presumptive cases will operate fairly and justly.

"Should injustices arise, we believe the President will rectify them. We are wholeheartedly behind his program."

No End Of Books.

By

Theodore Hall

There was a day, I freely admit, when my heart would leap up to behold rainbow words or their equivalent in a book title—"How to Write." Certain as death or taxes, by hook, crook or charge account, I corralled that book.

The resulting shelf of tomes faces me, at this very moment, with a kind of gleeful irony. On the north stands "Elements of Rhetoric and Laws of Moral Evidence and Persuasion," a solemn opus from the pen of the late Archbishop of Dublin, Richard Whately, in the new and revised edition of 1853.

On the south stands "This Fiction Business," a snowball for the silk hat of literary art tossed in 1929 by H. Bedford Jones, writer for the pulp-paper magazines. In between is every one from the gentle Sir Arthur Quiller-Couch to the ubiquitous Prof. Pitkin.

So long have they stood there, indeed, and so tight has grown their clannishness (not to speak of their adhesion, cover to cover), that they will probably welcome a newcomer as heartily as a nudist colony welcomes a duchess swathed in 4 yards of silk brocade.

* * * *

But they must make room for one more guide to the so-called rosy realm of authorship, and one which has stolen a march on them all.

"Becoming a Writer" (Harcourt Brace, $2) is the work of a frank and sensible woman, Mrs. Dorothea Brande. From years of writing, editing and teaching, she learned all the usual pointers. But because she saw that "the difficulties of the amateur writer begin long before he has come to the place where he can benefit from technical instruction in story-writing," she was discontent with the old approaches. She looked at the matter very clear-eyed, and she found something no other adviser to tyros has mentioned.

Mrs. Brande believes that there is a magic in writing, and that it is teachable. The secret, in short, is that the writer is a working duality—part unconscious flow, part conscious censor. All previous books stress far too much the conscious factor, the critical eye bent close on words and purpose, so close at times that the flow is quite inhibited.

Since, as Mrs. Brande observes, anyone who plans to write must know how to tap some deep and boundless reservoir; he must come first of all to an intelligent use of the unconscious. For that, she states is the well of all writing, and the process of utilizing it the veritable act of what we call genius.

With this thesis, Mrs. Brande goes on to suggest certain methods (all proved by her experience), by which this seeming magic may be accomplished. Yet there is nothing pretentiously mystical about them—they are simple and founded on good sense. In essence, they consist in finding what you have inside you and in making easy and natural the expression thereof. For writers who find themselves strained, self-conscious and often deadlocked, Mrs. Brande's advices should prove invaluable.

* * * *

Into her book she has put far more than the main thesis already mentioned. It is studded with little nuggets of wisdom which are not often seen in print.

Don't read fiction while writing fiction.

Never tell any one about your story before it is written—the natural impulse toward communication must go entirely into your work.

Choose nonverbal recreations—music, picture galleries, wood-chopping.

Have no fear of the trite plot—every plot is trite until a personality has made it individual.

Learn to write on schedule, as a debt of honor to yourself.

All these advices Mrs. Brande explains with undeniable logic, with complete honesty and sympathy. She, at least, recognizes that before the young writer is ready to deal with plot and style and all the other cliches of the textbook, he must first face himself as a writing person. "Becoming a Writer," from its very wording as a title to the last line of its excellent little bibliography, accepts the fact that first things come first. That is its unique merit.

And on exactly the same principle, this book must be the first on every writer's shelf. It thoroughly deserves such a position.

In the Margin.

"Smirt," the new novel by Branch Cabell, and his first work of fiction in six years, has an acrostic dedication to a man famous in the world of letters. The novel will appear March 5, from the house of McBride. Here is the dedication. Can you find the name of the person Mr. Cabell has in mind?

"Granting dullness might esteem
Egoistic any dream
Of an author's loves and laurels,
Rightly I recite its morals . . .

"Gifted, Smirt forever finds
Everywhere inferior minds;
Jesting, Smirt provokes insanely
Each and all reared less urbanely;
And, derided, Smirt derides.

"None the less, Smirt, too, decides
Neither wit nor erudition
Amply bolsters Smirt's position . . .

"Thereupon, with heart unhurt,
He perceives that Smirt stays Smirt,
And attests this by imploring
Naught of dullness save ignoring."

Another Revue Augments Film At Loew's Fox

"Artists and Models" Stars Jans and Whalen; Bills at Other Theaters.

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

The 1934 edition of "Artists and Models," with a trio of laugh-provoking celebrities heading a cast of 45 performers in what is described as one of Broadway's most entertaining revues, and the screen feature, "I Am Suzanne," bringing Lilian Harvey and Gene Raymond together in a romance as simple and rapturous as "Seventh Heaven," is the entertainment that Loew's Fox will inaugurate tomorrow.

Jans and Whalen, universally popular comics; Jimmy Savo, versatile funster, and Joe Herbert, the vest-pocket edition of Harry Richman, are the principals in the revue, presented here for the first time at popular prices. Other features are the Singing Sextette and a bevy of beautiful artists models as well as the startling novelty the "Living Chandelier." "Artists and Models" is presented in 18 scenes and is embellished with many tuneful melodies.

"I Am Suzanne" is Lilian Harvey's third starring vehicle in this country and for the first time she is given full opportunity to display her versatility. It is a tender romance that is laid against the novel background of a unique marionette show and brings to the screen for the first time the celebrated Podrecca Picolli Marionettes.

Leslie Banks, Halliwell Hoobes, Georgia Keane and others support Miss Harvey in this picture.

Play of South On the Screen

Combining with one of the most absorbing stories ever filmed the stellar talents of Janet Gaynor and Lionel Barrymore, "Carolina" will bring a poignant drama to the screen of Loew's Palace Theater tomorrow.

In addition to Miss Gaynor, who portrays her seventeenth stellar screen role, and Lionel Barrymore, who, as "Uncle Bob" Connelly, a hero of the Confederacy who lives only in the past, the cast boasts Robert Young, Richard Cromwell, Henrietta Crosman, Stepin Fetchit, Mona Barrie and Russell Simpson.

The story concerns the life of a Southern family who live in the glories of the past and the poverty of the present. Into their lives comes a charming girl of the North whose vision, charm and sincerity fire this family with a new will to succeed and brings to them a new happiness and prosperity. The story is based on Paul Green's play, "The House of Connelly."

Contest Stars Filmed at Met

"Search for Beauty," the picture for which the Paramount studios conducted an international contest to find the 15 most perfect women and the 15 most perfect men in all English-speaking countries throughout the world, will be the attraction at Warner Bros. Metropolitan Theater, starting tomorrow.

In addition to the contest winners, Larry ("Buster") Crabbe, Ida Lupino, Robert Armstrong, James Gleason, Roscoe Karns and Toby Wing have featured roles.

"Search for Beauty" tell the story of two shrewd, money-mad promoters who are no sooner released from prison than they start new rackets connected with the Olympic games. Two popular champions, Ida Lupino, diver, and Buster Crabbe, swimmer, are singled out as victims of their crooked schemes. The two young people are soon interested in a health magazine and health farm idea, and unwittingly become aids for the promoters. After they get wise to their position, outsmart the crooks, and turn an otherwise crooked deal into an honest endeavor they fall in love.

"Beloved" Held Over at Rialto

The popularity of John Boles and Gloria Stuart in "Beloved," now playing at the Rialto Theater, has demanded that the production be held over for a second week.

"Beloved" presents Mr. Boles in a singing role, opposite Miss Stuart, in a film that is easily the most beautiful musical romance of the year. Paul Gangelin wrote the story and Victor Schertzinger directed the production.

The score is Mr. Schertzinger's and the supporting cast includes Albert Conti, Dorothy Peterson, Morgan Farley, Ruth Hall, Edmund Breese, Holmes Herbert, Richard Carle, Lucille Gleason, Mae Busn, Bessie Barriscale and King Baggot.

In setting and action, "Beloved" is unique. It covers a span of 100 years and its locale includes the old Vienna of the first Austrian revolution, New York in the 60s, the American Civil War and New York of the present day.

Mystery Story Offers Puzzle

Starting tomorrow, Warner Bros. Earle Theater offers as its program the screen production, "The Ninth Guest," a baffling mystery with Donald Cook and Genevieve Tobin, and on the stage, Reggie Childs and his Hotel Roosevelt Orchestra and entertainers.

"The Ninth Guest" tells the story of eight people who are summoned by a mysterious telegram to attend a party in a penthouse high above the city. When they are gathered, a voice from the radio announces that they are all to meet death. Each of the guests suspects the other of being the arch fiend, and five of them die before the real murderer is known. It is only when the madman attempts to separate two lovers that he meets his Waterloo.

Prominent in the supporting cast are Hardie Albright, Helen Flint, Nella Walker, Edward Ellis, Edwin Maxwell, Vincent Barnett and Samuel S. Hinds.

Reggie Childs and his Hotel Roosevelt Orchestra present 22 musicians, comedians, singers and entertainers, including Crawford and Caskey, Don Howard, Olaf Odin and the Three Little Pigs. Other acts will be the Stanley Bros. in Tricks and Kicks; Whitey, the canine star, and Ed Ford in an amusing skit, "Late Again," and a special attraction, the famous screen star, Betty Boop, in person. Betty Boop, it will be remembered is the charming miss of the Betty Boop cartoons.

Short-reel subjects, the newsreel and the Earle orchestral prelude will round out the program.

Attractions in Three Picture Houses as New Week Opens

Clark Gable, Claudette Colbert in "It Happened One Night"—RKO-Keith's.

J. Carroll Naish, Wynne Gibson in "Sleepers East" —Columbia.

Gloria Stuart, John Boles in "Beloved"—Rialto.

Gable-Colbert Duo Continues

RKO-Keith's is continuing the first Clark Gable-Claudette Colbert co-starring feature, "It Happened One Night," for an additional week. The elements notwithstanding, this picture has been running up new attendance records at the Fifteenth street theater.

Quite naturally the two stars are the prime factors in the success of "It Happened One Night," but others, too, are deserving of a portion of the credit. For instance, Frank Capra, the director, who also gave us "Lady for a Day;" Walter Connolly, the splendid character actor, portraying Claudette's father, and Roscoe Karns, who is presenting a new sort of villain in the bus sequence of the picture.

Following "It Happened One Night," Keith's will offer the English production of "Catherine the Great," featuring Douglas Fairbanks, jr., and Elizabeth Bergner.

A Strong Cast In Tense Play

Wynne Gibson and Preston Foster are co-starred in the excitingly dramatic picture "Sleepers East," which Loew's Columbia Theater will feature for the week starting tomorrow.

It is a picturization of Frederick Nebel's best-selling book of the same name and in addition to the two principals boasts a stellar cast.

The story involves the adventures of a young girl, out on parole for a crime of which she is innocent, who involuntarily becomes the sole eyewitness of a murder committed by the mayor's drunken son. For political reasons the murder is pinned on the city's leading criminal, but opposing factions attempt to bring out the truth. The girl leaves town fearing arrest. The truth is ultimately learned and she is permitted to resume her normal life.

Mona Barrie, Harvey Stephens, J. Carroll Naish, Roger Imhor and Howard Lally support Miss Gibson and Mr. Foster.

Martinsburg, W. Va., March 1 (Spl.).—Federal Land Bank officials have agreed to the request of the West Virginia Horticulture Society for a reappraisal of orchards.

In a resolution adopted at its convention here February 14 and 15, the society said many of the appraisals made in this the second district had been unfair, and asked reappraisal in instances where grower-applicants requested it.

In reply, General Agent John Doughton, of the Farm Credit Administration of Baltimore, embracing the Federal Land Bank for this district, says:

"The land bank is agreeable to having reappraisement made in any and all instances where, in the opinion of the chief appraiser or of any officers of the bank, values as given in the original appraisal are not in keeping with the usual and standard values in that particular section."

He asks for names of those applicants for Federal Land Bank loans whose appraisals have not, in the opinion of the society, been satisfactory, stating that they will cheerfully be gone into for rectifying errors. He points also to the maximum loan value for orchard enhancement of $125 per acre, in addition to the land value, as enabling the bank to lend a more acceptable service to orchardists.

Jefferson County Slash Exceeds Others, Official Told.

Charles Town, W. Va., March 1 (Spl.).—Protest against greater reductions in CWA personnel in Jefferson County than in neighboring counties has been voiced by the town in a letter to William N. Beehler, State administrator.

Cuts in this county have reduced the number of CWA employes from 650 to 222 since projects were organized. The letter points out that 350 families here are directly dependent on community welfare agencies for relief.

It further shows that reduction of workers here has been more stringent than in Berkeley and Hardy Counties, where the present personnel totals 1,600 men.

That resumption of farming operations has made Jefferson County better able to stand the cuts is denied in the protest, which declares that there has been little or no improvement in farm employment conditions.

The letter was prepared by Lee Bushong, city attorney.

Virginia House Ready for Tax Battle Today

Peery Confident on Vote; Sales Levy Killed; Budget Passes.

Richmond, March 1 (AP).—Arrival of Gov. Peery's $875,000 tax program for schools on a special order before the House of Delegates tomorrow will bring to a climax the 1934 session of the Virginia General Assembly.

The House, preparing for the most controversial subject of the session, today passed the budget bill, while its finance committee virtually killed the Massenburg sales tax bill and the McCue chain store tax bill.

Gov. Peery himself whittled the program down to $875,000 from its original figure in excess of $1,000,000. Today he requested that his bill taxing municipally owned utilities outside the jurisdiction of the respective cities, be withdrawn from consideration of the Senate Finance Committee.

Governor Optimistic.

The Governor and other proponents of his big eight-point tax program were optimistic over prospects of the measure in both houses. His advisers tonight said they had counted more than enough votes in both houses.

The burden of the program falls principally on public utility companies and income tax payers. It includes also a rearrangement of the merchants license tax, providing that they shall be taxed on their sales instead of purchases as heretofore.

While the Governor advocates a program estimated to bring in $875,000 additional revenue, the bill as reported to the House by the House finance committee is accompanied by amendments which would knock another $100,000 out of the additional revenues. The bill not only increases taxes and shifts tax burdens, but it specifically appropriates all the new revenue to public schools.

Sales Tax Killed.

The Governor contends this is necessary if a minimum term of eight months is to be had by all schools next year.

Charges were made, when Delegate Alven Massenburg, of Hampton, introduced the 2 per cent sales tax bill, that the sales tax proposal was a club being held over the head of the Assembly until the Governor's tax program was disposed of.

This bill was "temporarily passed by" in the House Finance Committee today. This was taken to mean its death, since the committee will not meet again until Tuesday, and Monday is the last day for consideration of House bills by the House. The same sort of a death knell was sounded over the McCue chain store tax bill.

Bill Would Doom Fees.

The fee system of compensating major officers in Virginia local government would be ended in a bill passed last night by the Senate, 34 to 5.

The bill, which must be considered by the House, would abolish fee compensation for Commonwealth's attorneys, commissioners of revenue and local treasurers, and put these officers on salaries fixed in the bill.

The same bill would abolish the present fee commission and set up a "compensation board" with a paid chairman for supervision of the offices and the salaries.

The salary scale ranges from $750 a year to $7,500 for Commonwealth's attorneys; from $1,250 to $6,500 for county treasurers, and from $1,250 to $6,000 for county commissioners of revenue.

Dark Past

Fingerprints Bare 16-Year Career of Crime.

Frederick, Md., March 1 (Spl.).—A 16-year criminal record was revealed yesterday for Frank Murray, a transient sentenced several days ago to the State House of Correction for stealing here. The record was received by Chief of Police William F. Steiner through Murray's fingerprints in the Bureau of Investigation, Washington, D. C.

In 1908, as James B. Logan, Murray was imprisoned for three years in Concord, Mass., for housebreaking. He served three months in New York in 1922 on a similar charge, and in Tampa, Fla., he served six months for larceny and 15 days for vagrancy.

Two years later he was jailed for 60 days in Washington on a drunkenness charge. In 1931 he was sent to jail in Albany, N. Y., for larceny and in 1933 he was given 30 days in Portland, Me., for theft. The last check-up was at Roxbury, Mass., where he was held on a charge of housebreaking.

U. S. Will Buy Mt. Tory Site

Recreational Park Plan Will Include Lake of 50 Acres.

Waynesboro, Va., March 1 (Spl.).—Through the efforts of Representative A. Willis Robertson and Park Supervisor John W. McNair, of Harrisonburg, the Federal Government has agreed to bear the entire cost of the purchase of private lands needed for the proposed recreational park at Mount Tory, 14 miles south of here in the George Washington National Forest.

David T. Coiner, president of the chamber of commerce here, was notified of this change after the chamber had raised nearly $500 locally to aid in the purchase of the land. This money will be refunded to the contributors.

Construction of a 30-foot dam in the park to create an artificial lake of 50 acres has been started under supervision of W. B. Gallaher, consultant engineer of Waynesboro. Members of the Sand Spring C. C. C. group are clearing the territory surrounding the lake site and are also improving roadways leading to the site. The recreational park site of 200 acres will be a mile from the proposed southern extension of the Skyline Drive. The project probably will be completed by September 1.

Income Tax Test Sent to High Court

Coal Operator Terms Law Unconstitutional.

Charleston, W. Va., March 1 (Spl.).—A test case on West Virginia's gross income tax law was sent to the Supreme Court today from Kanawha County.

Its constitutionality attacked by John Laing, Charleston coal operator, before Judge A. P. Hudson in circuit court, State objections were sustained and an appeal granted.

The tax requires payment of 1 per cent on all gross incomes above $600 except farm incomes, with exemptions of $1,000 for married persons and $200 for each dependent. It was enacted last May, and the State tax commissioner ruled it was payable for the full year. Laing contends it can not be made retroactive and is attacking the law generally, asserting it violates the Federal and State Constitutions.

Virginia Realty Board Finance Cut From Bill

Senate Approval of House Action Means Abolition of Commission.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Richmond, Va., March 1.—Warnings of Delegate William D. Medley, of Clarendon, that abolition of the real estate commission would encourage Virginia operations by unscrupulous Washington dealers were disregarded today by the House of Delegates.

At the same time the House finance committee virtually killed a proposed 2 per cent general sales tax by indefinitely delaying action on the Massenburg bill.

The House approved the administration-sponsored $82,000,000 appropriation bill for the next biennium. An item of $12,270 to finance operations of the realty commission was stricken out. Senate concurrence would mean the end of the board.

Medley reported Congress was expected to tighten laws governing real estate transactions in the District. He declared all dishonest operators driven from Washington would take refuge in Virginia unless the board remained in existence.

"The real estate commission," he added, "has kept the business on a comparatively clean basis. We should think a long time before doing away with it."

Delegate Charles W. Moss, Richmond, argued practically all brokers in the larger cities favored abolition of the board. The commission was characterized as useless by Delegate Samuel D. Rodgers, Petersburg.

A last-minute attempt to increase school appropriations from $5,120,345 to $6,120,345 was defeated, 43 to 42. The move was intended to place the House on record as favoring a deficit rather than $875,000 in new taxes, sought by Gov. Peery.

Perhaps the most outstanding amendment approved added an appropriation of $125,000 for replacement of the Tyler Building at the Staunton State School for the Deaf and Blind.

Delegate W. Stuart Moffet, of Staunton, charged the institution was so overcrowded, students were required to sleep in the chapel.

Delegate Ashton Dovell, Williamsburg, unsuccessfully sought to delay the $125,000 appropriation pending a decision on whether the schools for the deaf and the blind were to be separated.

Rodgers failed to put through an amendment to increase pensions of disabled Confederate veterans from $360 to $480 a year.

A resolution providing for a plea to Congress to give voting privileges to Washington residents was killed by a House committee. Opponents said they feared Negroes would control elections if the Constitution were amended to grant the franchise to District of Columbia citizens.

Camp Roosevelt 1934.

Linn C. Drake, Scout executive, has written Scout leaders:

"Now, while snow is on the ground, is a good time to begin thinking of and planning for your next summer's stay at Camp Roosevelt. Already considerable work has been done on lining up the staff. 'Matty,' 'Spike,' 'Stew,' and 'Tiny' will all be back again—and that's a pretty good start toward guaranteeing a successful season. We expect also to have Harry Cutler in charge of the commissary again—great news for those who love good 'eats.' Remember that banquet and the 'emu' last year?"

Housewarming Draws Many.

The housewarming at the new Scout headquarters, 1018 Vermont avenue, Monday night was a real success with an attendance of more than 100 scouters and friends of scouting. Music was furnished by the McKinley Technical High School Quartet. Any who missed the housewarming are invited to stop in any time to see the new Scout headquarters.

Feed the Birds.

Scouts, Sea Scouts and especially Cubs have a wonderful opportunity to assist in preservation of wild life. The bird food funds of the United States Biological Survey are practically exhausted, but winter is still with us. Bread, preferably whole wheat, is probably the best all-round bird food.

Hobbies to Be Shown.

At the monthly meeting of the District of Columbia Cub leaders held Monday evening it was agreed to hold an exhibit of Cub hobbies, including collections, handicrafts and models, on Saturday afternoon and evening, March 26, at the Training Center, 1018 Vermont avenue.

Clothes Mobilization.

Three whistles, three shots, three stones along the trail; three of anything in Scout parlance is recognized as a sign of danger or distress and a Scout never fails to answer this call. Surely we recognize in our President's urgent request, our people's sore need and the promise in our Scout oath, the three points of a distress signal that calls us to this challenging "Home Rebuilding Good Turn"—the biggest ever attempted by the District of Columbia Boy Scouts.

This is what R. A. Van Orsdel, chairman of the civic service committee of the District Boy Scout Council, said in a communication to Scout leaders.

Keystone Troop.

Impromptu singing around a realistic campfire was the high spot on the ninth anniversary meeting, Parents' Night, of Troop 28, last Friday evening, held in the hall of the Church of the Covenant. The boys sang robusto and not much con brio, but closed with effective echoing at "taps" with the bugle.

The Panthers worked chemical wonders; the G. R.'s came through fine in their signalling stunt. "The Unknown Scout" was dramatized by the Flying Eagles, and the Mohawks presented their patrol magician.

Master of Ceremonies Watson introduced Scoutmaster Rose, who made a short talk. The parents were then served ice cream, and viewed patrol exhibits in the Scout room.

A regular closing ceremony finished the meeting, giving the parents a chance to see the Scouts in action.

Wilbur Lawyer, of the Flying Eagles, will receive his patrol leader's warrant this evening, and will take his oath of office.

Three Keystoners were made Stars, and the junior assistant carried the troop flag to get the President's award, at the last court.

State Ignores Death Demand In Dean Trial

"Up to Jury," Prosecutor Says in Poison Highball Case.

Greenwood, Miss., March 1 (AP). Without specifically requesting the death penalty, in final arguments the State today asked the jury trying Dr. Sarah Ruth Dean on a murder charge for the alleged poison whisky highball death of Dr. John Preston Kennedy to "consider her case as you would a man's."

"You promised to try this case on the evidence presented and to bring in a verdict of guilty or not guilty regardless of the fact that the defendant is a woman.

"The fact she is a woman is no shield for crime," Means Johnston, special prosecutor retained by the Kennedy family, told the jury.

District Attorney Arthur Jordan told newsmen:

"I have never demanded a death verdict of a jury and I won't now," he said. "There are some facts in this case which we believe warrant a verdict of death and I shall so inform the jury about this. That is a matter for the jury to decide."

Johnston read to the jury instructions drawn by the State, asserting these provided two verdicts in favor of the State—guilty as charged, automatically carrying a death-by-hanging penalty, and guilty, which would carry a life sentence.

For the defense, Attorney Dick Denman told the jury its instructions provided for a verdict of acquittal "if any reasonable doubt in your minds that Kennedy met death in the exact manner charged by the State."

Kennedy's alleged dying statement that Dr. Dean poisoned him with a whisky highball, midnight, July 27, is the keystone of the State's case.

Unmoved, Dr. Dean, the 36-year-old defendant, listened to these preliminaries attentively.

Directly behind her sat the dead surgeon's divorced wife, Mrs. Bessie Barry Kennedy, who testified that Dr. Dean "broke up her home."

Bootleg Rum Use Increased

Major Ray Says Product Better, Cheaper Than Legal Liquor.

Detroit, March 1 (AP).—Nearly three months after the repeal of prohibition, the administrator of the alcoholic beverage unit of the Department of Justice here believes the majority of the drinking public still is patronizing bootleggers.

Maj. W. L. Ray, who was head of the special investigation division of prohibition enforcement before repeal, said today he was convinced that "there are more stills in operation here since repeal, and their capacity is double what it used to be."

Furthermore, he said, the alley distillers have improved their products to compete in quality with licensed distillers, "even going to the extent of putting their liquor in charred kegs and aging it."

The result, he explained, is that the bootleggers are purveying "a better grade of cheaply priced liquor, some of it at 75 cents a quart, than the low priced liquor in the State stores."

Based upon seizures by his men in February, he estimated that a minimum of 300,000 gallons of liquor a month is being distilled illegally here and, he added, "we can't even hope to raid any substantial number of the stills."

Hawaii Swears In Poindexter As Governor

Ceremony Is Simple as Former Cowboy Takes Island Reins.

Honolulu, March 1 (AP).—In the red-carpeted room where only a few years ago Hawaiian monarchs reigned, Joseph B. Poindexter, one time cowboy of the Montana range, took the oath today as the eighth Governor of Hawaii.

The inauguration, brief and simple, took place in the Iolani Palace, the Territory's capitol building. The oath was administered by Chief Justice James J. Banks of the Supreme Court. There was no inaugural address. A few friends of Mr. Poindexter and of his predecessor, Lawrence M. Judd, were present, as was the new governor's daughter, Miss Helen Poindexter. She will be the official hostess at Washington Place, the governor's residence.

Gov. Poindexter's appointment by President Roosevelt ended almost eight months speculation during which Mr. Judd, Republican, continued to hold the gubernatorial office.

$1,000 "Dognaping" Baffles Detectives

Owner Fails to Contact Terrier's Abductors.

Chicago, March 1 (AP). — The "snatching" of Kid Boots remained as complete a mystery tonight as it was Sunday, when the Kid, a 13-pound Boston Bull Terrier, vanished from a Chicago dog show.

Today's hunt furnished no clews, although the first ransom call, a demand for $1,000, or $500 if that was too much, came from a West Side restaurant, amateur sleuths reported to Louis Rudginsky, the dog's owner.

Rudginsky said he would make one more attempt to contact the abductors, this time by a newspaper advertisement inviting the "dognapers" to get in touch with him. Glum and exasperated, he bought a ticket to Boston and planned to return tonight.

Progressives Open Session On Education

Radical Aims Are Denied by Cleveland Parley Speakers.

Cleveland, March 1 (AP).—A sharp conflict between the "old school" and the "new school" of American educators was pictured today as the Progressive Education Association began its Nationaal convention.

While a dozen speakers addressed the convention, W. W. Beatty, of Bronxville, N. Y., summarized the conflict with a frank discussion of the association's aims, and denied the frequent charge that his group is "radical."

Asserting that most of America's schools are dodging vital economic and social problems, Beatty declared, "we merely want to teach the truth. The battle develops because many American teachers lack the courage to teach controversial subjects, and some are determined to restrain us."

Beatty said an incorrect impression of the association's aims contributes to the difficulty. "We are not socialistic, communistic or radical," he said.

"Instead, we believe in teaching all sides of a question, and let the apparent truths stand for themselves."

The present convention, Beatty said, is seeking ways and means of convincing parents as well as teachers that this method is proper.

Red Cross Entertains Tokugawa of Japan With Reception.

Capital Society Showers Honors on Visitor in Busy Day.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Yesterday was another day of delightful entertaining for the former president of the House of Peers of Japan, Prince Iyesato Tokugawa, who is spending several days in the Capital.

Among the guests were the Ambassador of Japan, Mr. Hirosi Saito; the Japanses Ambassador to Canada, Prince Iyemasa Tokugawa; the Chief Justice, Mr. Charles Evans Hughes; the Secretary of State, Mr. Cordell Hull; the Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Henry A. Morgenthau, jr.; the Secretary of the Interior, Mr. Harold L. Ickes; Senator Key Pittman, Senator Joseph T. Robinson, Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, Representative Sam D. McReynolds, the Undersecretary of State, Mr. William Phillips; the Surgeon General of the Public Health Service, Gen. Hugh S. Cummings; the Chairman of the American Red Cross, Judge John Barton Payne; Mr. Marvin H. McIntyre, Mr. Stephen T. Early, Mr. James Clement Dunn, the Chief of the Far Eastern Division of the State Department, Dr. Stanley K. Hornbeck; Capt. Walter N. Vernou and Col. Edwin M. Watson.

The table was decorated with pink carnations, sweet peas, freesia, and Baldii fern.

Red Cross Reception.

In the afternoon, the American Red Cross in the persons of Judge John Barton Payne, chairman of the organization, and Miss Mabel Boardman, secretary, entertained at a large and brilliant reception in honor of the distinguished visitor, at the Red Cross headquarters.

The marble halls were decorated with palms and ferns, with Japanese, American and Red Cross flags adding color. In the large reception room on the second floor, with its blue and violet-tinted stained-glass windows, the receiving line formed to receive the guests after the scarlet-coated Marine Band had played the Japanese national anthem.

In the receiving line, besides the hosts and the guest of honor, were Prince Iyemasa Tokugawa, Japanese Minister to Canada; his young daughter, Miss Toyo Tokugawa, and Mme. Saito, wife of the Ambassador of Japan. Miss Boardman wore a gown of wine-colored crepe with a smart black hat and a silver fox scarf. Mme. Saito wore a gown of cocoa brown lace with a hat of a darker shade of brown velvet, and Miss Tokugawa wore a frock of bright coral crepe and a small black tricorne hat.

Miss Olivia Stokes, daughter of Canon and Mrs. Anson Phelps Stokes, served punch, and wore a gown of eel grey trimmed with maroon-colored velvet and a matching hat.

As the guests passed down the receiving line, numerous Japanese ladies were noticed in the group, and all of them shook hands with the gentlemen in the line, but in true Oriental fashion folded their hands in front of them and bowed very low to Mme. Saito, who returned the salutation in like manner.

Emory Singers Offer Concert Here Tonight

Dance Follows University Glee Club Program at Hotel.

A dance will follow the concert to be given by the Emory University Glee Club at 8:30 o'clock tonight at the Mayflower.

The glee club is best known for its singing of Negro spirituals, having won praise as far afield as London and Glasgow. The club's repertoire includes a number of spirituals that have been arranged by Dr. Malcolm Dewey, the conductor, and members of the club after hearing the songs sung by Negroes.

Included in the list of favorite spirituals are "Steal Away," "Good News," "Shornin' Bread," "Little David, Play on Your Harp," "Couldn't Hear Nobody Pray," "I Ain't Gonna Study War No More," "Welcome Table," "Chariots Are Coming," "Rolling Along," "Go Down Moses" and "Deep River."

Sale of Blouses Shows Original Prices Cut Deep

Opportunity to Replace Old Lampshades at Small Cost Also Given.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

There are bargains that will get you if you don't watch out!

Two sales make today's shopping more exciting than usual. And far more interesting! A large department store has literally slashed the price tags of blouses, tramped on them and thrown them aside. Instead of the old tags, there are shiny new ones reading 69 cents instead of $1.19, and $1.95 rather than $3.95. It's hard to believe, but these brand-new tags are attached to the same blouses that only a week ago sold for several times their present price.

Of course it's a miscellaneous lot and fascinating because of its wide variety. Silks mingle with crepes, crepes with taffetas, sizes 32 to 40, all bunched together. A bird's-eye view discloses a table rampant with color-plaids, checks, solids, reds, greens, browns, tans and whites! It's impossible to be an onlooker without getting blouse conscience and delving into the pile for a bargain blouse.

• • • •

Lampshades for Little.

Another sale has dethroned a batch of lamp shades, taken them down from their perch in the shelves and placed them on a counter with a large sign above them reading "Lamp shades, 25 cents, 35 cents and 49 cents!"

Why not make a survey of the house today and see which shades hang in tatters, which have telltale patches, or which are merely dingy and dirty. If any one or all of them need to be supplanted with newer, neater and brighter shades, make a note of the approximate measurements required and sally forth to look over this heterogeneous assortment.

Although innumerable shapes are included in the sale, there are as a whole three divisions, small, medium and large. Some are round, others square, and some a combination of standard shapes.

Among the most attractive are some light tan parchments with a bit of sunlight shading underneath. However, with a large variety to choose from, almost any taste or fancy can be satisfied.

Hairbrush Bargain.

Women have become so interested in improving their appearance and making the best of their good features that those who don't know the fundamentals are few and far between. Most women realize how essential it is to brush the hair often and thoroughly, not only to give it a smooth glossiness but to keep the scalp stimulated.

Many women, however, do not pay proper attention to the kind of brush they use. It should be one with bristles sufficiently hard and long to penetrate through the hair to the scalp. A brush designed on the rolling idea is good. It is simple to wield and covers several scalp inches at one stroke.

High-calibered brushes of this type are generally expensive, but occasionally it's possible to find a good one for comparatively little. In fact, there are some excellent brushes in town now selling for as little as $1.50. They are of a special make, and only available at one shop.

• • • •

Unusual Home Plants.

The so-called Japanese gardens, in reality little pottery flower boxes planted with several unusual plants, have become a rage with Washington shoppers.

The outside cold and bleakness and the hesitancy of spring to give indications of arriving postpones that outside gardening urge and breaks out in the desire to have something green and growing in the house.

These extraordinary and fanciful little gardens are filled with amazing plants, little rubber trees, called because of their sturdy quality and sharp pointed leaves, "mother-in-law's tongues." And red ivy. And a mystery plant which no one seems to know much about. It resembles the seedling of a Southern sweet-gum, with its pinkish stems and three point leaves.

Midnight Supper Service.

Social supper pieces must be durable enough to stand the strain of midnight suppers when guests aren't as cautious with the hostess' china as they might be. They must be dainty and pretty, but at the same time must suit the informality of the occasion.

Such a service is close at hand—in the upstairs department of an F street shop. The white pottery plates, bon bon dishes and platters are all built to fill the above requirements. Their very plainness is a decided attribute, a relief, a rest to the eyes after a full evening of dining and dancing.

Even the simplest meals, hastily scrambled eggs, Welch rarebit, toasted sandwiches or whatever is the order of the day, look tempting against the soothing white background. In this instance the white is tinted to suggest ivory or eggshell color, more attractive for this kind of china than the dead or bone white of many dinner services.

Introducing Modern Note in Interior of Homes Need Not Mean Junking All Its Old Furniture

Sharpest Change Is Made in Draperies, Upholstery and Floor Coverings.

By Jo Ellen Maxson.

Up and down the land we have an exciting new world of streamline trains, air liners and skyscrapers. Why not adjust the interiors of our homes to the forward trend?

Introducing the modern note doesn't mean that you have to strip your house of all its former furniture and make a new beginning. It is the viewpoint that is most important. Tomorrow's home has smartness and originality.

The word "contemporary" shouldn't be confused with the outmoded term "modernistic." Contemporary decorating means the simplified, modern treatment of period homes as well as rooms done in furniture of the present day.

The sharpest change is in floor covering, upholstery and drapery fabrics and the accessories that contribute so much to a room. The larger pieces remain much the same.

In a charming living-room in a small house, the walls are painted soft apple green to emphasize the new use of color. It makes a pleasing background for the accents of white in lamp shades and pottery. Eggplant, mulberry, deeper green and an occasional suggestion of red complete the color scheme.

The rug is in solid color, eggplant, and the woodwork is painted flat white. The glass curtains are of fine cream striped marquisette, and the straight-hanging draperies are of green linen in a very new rough-textured chevron weave. The green is darker than the walls and is picked up with threads of beige and red. It looks somewhat like old zigzag needle work with a modern zest.

The sofa is re-covered in an interesting and newly designed glazed chintz. The mulberry background with the pattern, copied from circular pressed glass tie-backs, in beige and white, carries out the latest idea in materials, that of dark backgrounds patterned in neutrals. The seam edges are bound and welted in mulberry chintz.

One of the chairs is upholstered in a deep cream novelty cotton weave that gives a rough, nubby effect. It is edged in heavy white cotton fringe. A nearby eighteenth century table of simple lines adapts itself as readily to its modern environment as it did to period rooms. On this is placed a lamp with a round chromium base and smooth oval shade of white parchment.

Ash trays and book ends bring in bits of gleaming chromium and mirror. Flower holders are of red glass to repeat the note of red in the draperies.

Beggars All

By Katharine Newlin Burt

The Story Thus Far.

Rafe Courboisier, last member of an impoverished Southern family, is released from a secret outlaw rendezvous by Madrone, its ruler, on his promise to obey Madrone's orders. They will be written to him in a unique green ink. Candle Island, his family home in Chetteraw, has been bought by Hortense Kendall, a rich and beautiful girl from the North. Rafe takes service as her boatman. She falls in love with him, and he tells her of his enslavement by Madrone. She gives him a letter from her guardian, Harmon Jay. It is written in Madrone's green ink.

Chapter XI.

Rafe heard his own voice asking jerkily, "Does he always—your guardian in New England—does he always use green ink in his letters?"

"Not always . . . I think it's just for business letters, those he would keep copies of. Though I don't suppose your note is that, either. You'll find some of Mr. Jay's green ink down in your cabin. I filled one side of that double inkstand with it because the black ink gave out and I found a bottle he'd left here."

"Does he come here often?"

"Very rarely."

Rafe had glanced down at the even emerald script. It was of a violent and peculiar green. What in the world could a man like Jay, thoroughly investigated by Ben Jenkyns, and so far removed, have to do with . . . well, with anything? And his instructions—if that is what they were!—were so courteously worded, so rhythmically in tune with his own accidental-seeming intentions. He returned to the conviction of enchantment:

"Dear Mr. Courvoisier: I hear from Mr. Jenkyns that you have followed my suggestion and made your headquarters on the island. I think you will agree with me that under the circumstances, under any circumstances, indeed, it would be advisable for Miss Kendall to engage some older lady for chaperon. (Of course the green ink is a coincidence, Rafe's mind ejaculated.) She should meet the right people, the Crewes, the Dares, the Romboudts. (The queer Yank knows his Chetteraw and that proves it a coincidence!) If you will assist us, I assure you, Mr. Courvoisier, that both my ward and myself will be in your debt and you need feel under no obligation for the trifling service we have been able to do for you on your return to your native heath. Let me hear from you, please. Sincerely,

"HARMON JAY."

Rafe Grows Relieved.

Rafe, sitting in the boat and flying across the bright sheen of water, felt suddenly enormously relieved and reassured. Perhaps Madrone had forgotten him. Perhaps Madrone, leading that life of his, was already dead. Perhaps the instructions he dreaded would never come at all.

Tine, visited during Aunt Dam's nap, flushed with excitement, hope and fear. "Do you think she'll like me enough? Oh, Rafe, honey, suppose she turns me down!"

"She won't. She'll like you, if you will like her. She's a strange creature. Savage and alien, untamed inside. Outside she's rather magnificent."

The interview between Bettine Dare and Hortense Kendall at teatime on the island went off very well, Tine told Rafe when she came down to the landing thereafter for him to take her back to Chetteraw.

"I am giving a tea for her at Cousin Mary Romboudt's" she said excitedly. "And next thing, we'll have a dance on Candle Island!"

The sound of violins, the sweet sound of violins. They drew Rafe up along the island and through the woods to the lighted gardens. The Sleeping Beauty's gardens were awake. Rafe Courvoisier had, of course, been invited to Miss Kendall's party and he was dressed for dancing; but some undefined dread of hurt and of estrangement had kept him down in his lonely cabin until the distant violins had worked upon him.

As he reached a long open window, the waltz swung to its yearning close and the dancers began to drift out. A woman paused near him, turning back as she came through the window. She did not see him and she spoke to the man that followed her.

"It just makes me ache to think how rich she is, young and rich and her own mistress—when I remember what my own girlhood was like, Randy."

Looks Sharply Through Leaves.

Rafe looked sharply through the leaves. The woman was like a silver eel, small, slim, sheathed in lame, earrings to her naked shoulders. Hairlike platinum and a skin, naturally fair, darkened to an even color altogether estranged from natural sunburn. Rafe did not recognize her, but he knew at once the man she was speaking to, knew him before he spoke.

"Darn money!" Randal Crewe drawled gently; "if I'd had it, Lil, things would be mighty different now for us . . . and mighty happy too."

"Do you know what, Yonghy, you ought to jump in and marry this gal quick, before your Cousin Rafe can beat you to it."

Randy straightened. "Where's Rafe? I was told he'd be here."

Rafe let them move away and then followed. "Randy," he called, "you, Randy Crewe! Aren't you going to stop and speak to me?"

Even under the light of a swinging paper lantern Rafe could see that Randal had changed. He was sallow and soft and mysteriously damaged. His eyes were too large, his mouth too small and inclosed in deepening lines, his body, still elegant in pose and gesture, had thickened, sagged. Rafe wondered why Tine's imagination should be still enthralled, and what had stirred the passion of this pretty, sophisticated creature he called Lil.

But when Randal spoke to him, when Randal touched him, Rafe understood. The voice, the smile. For the first time, among these people Rafe felt himself at home again.

Rafe said: "Old Randy—let me take you and Mrs. Tasket out on the water. There's a canoe. I'm Miss Kendall's boatman, you know, so I have the key to the boathouse."

Randy laughed. "Boatman to a Yankee! What jest! Tell me something about your boss, Rafe? Rich as Croesus, isn't she? You're as lucky as a cat. What do you think of Lilian?

Rafe made the necessary compliment. He thought that Randy's eyes had an absent and harried look.

"Knew You Were Resurrected."

"I knew you were resurrected right enough, boy, but they told me you'd pulled out again, that Miss Courvoisier's house would be your headquarters. Nobody knew you'd been here, playing boatman to a lovely lady."

In the canoe Randy still did most of the talking. Rafe found it easier to satisfy his somewhat perfunctory curiosity than to escape the searching quality of Lilian's eyes. He had never in his varied experience, he decided, met such eyes. Blue, too, like Hortense Kendall's, but far from icy. Hot blue eyes, fervent eyes, misty . . . their lids were tinted, their lashes pointed with color . . . purple it looked. But all these finer details he noticed when he came back to the ballroom and danced with her. What chance had Tine against this girl?

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Who Should Run From Cold Weather?

Certain groups of people would gain materially in health and comfort if they could and would go South or to the far Southwest each year for a long winter vacation. One of the first of these groups is that of the senile people. Probably to this group should be added the larger part of the senescence group.

The rare judgment of John D. Rockefeller caused that wise old gentleman to adopt the long winter vacation habit years ago. He has passed 90 and is headed for a round century—and has hopes. Old people generally have one or more organs that represent their weak spots. Easy life in a soft climate offers them a chance to nurse these weak organs along until the entire machine collapses according to the way of Dr. Holmes' "one-hoss shay."

Persons subject to pneumonia, bronchitis and bronchial asthma find it advisable to take long winter vacations. If one attack of pneumonia develops any immunity it is not great and it is short-lived. There is some evidence that a person who has had one attack of pneumonia may expect another. At least he is not immune. He improves the chance of escaping another infection by taking a long winter vacation. Some people with obstinate bronchial coughs find their symptoms less troublesome within three days after they reach a softer climate. Some cases of bronchial asthma are much more comfortable when they winter where the climate is not hard.

Ability to stay in the sunlight and open air several times a day is of service in warding off some of the infections that prevail in cold climates in the late winter and spring. For infected sinus the climate cure is superior to operation.

Persons with Raynaud's disease or a tendency thereto are in danger in cold weather. This danger is lessened if they take a long winter vacation. Substitute the words "are uncomfortable" for "are in danger" and the advice applies also to people who are subject to chilblains and frostbite. Perhaps living in winter where the weather is mild may be of service to the diabetic in warding off gangrene and to the person subject to Buerger's disease in preventing leg cramps.

Investigation has shown a relationship between arthritis and rheumatism and climate. There is rheumatism in the warm winter regions, it is true, but statistics show it to be only moderately prevalent there—much less so than in cold, damp climates.

A fair proportion of the children in northern cities are in some measure rickety. Cod liver oil is a partial but not a complete substitute for sunshine.

Capital Kitchen

"Sweetened and Baked Culinary Compositions" (Noah Webster for Cakes), Favorite Food of Americans; Susan Mills Tells How to Make Several Kinds.

By Susan Mills.

Webster's Dictionary defines a cake as a "small mass of dough, baked." Funk & Wagnall's has it that a cake is "a sweetened and baked culinary composition."

Nothing inspirational about that.

But cakes are perhaps one of the most popular "culinary compositions" in the country—all the way from the simplest and the least expensive variety to the artistic delight made by our fancy bakers.

They say Americans are great pie eaters, that they eat more pie than anything else—next to chicken a la king, which in the opinion of Chef Marsal of Club Michel is the American favorite. But (not intending slang) are we not great cake-eaters too?

Here is one of the cake recipes from the Congressionl Cook Book. It is from a recipe book of Mme. van Rennselaer, dated 1730. It is a little complicated, but might be interesting to try.

Olijkoecks (Oil Cakes).

At 12 o'clock set a little yeast to rise so as to be ready at 5 p. m. to mix with the following ingredients: 3¾ pounds flour, 1 pound sugar, ½ pound butter and lard (mixed), 1½ pints milk, 6 eggs, 1 pint raised yeast, 1 nutmeg (grated), raisins, apples, citron (cut up).

Warm butter and lard, milk and sugar together; grate nutmeg into flour; add eggs last. Place in warm place to rise; if quite light by bedtime, work them down by pressing with the hand; at 9 o'clock next morning make into small balls. Place in the center of each a bit of raisin, citron and apple; lay on well-floured pie board; allow to rise again. They are frequently ready to boil at 2 o'clock; in removing them from the board, use a knife well floured; give them a little roll with the hand to make them round. Have fat boiling; boil each five minutes. When cool, roll in sifted sugar. In the olden days they were boiled in oil, hence the name, which is literally oil cakes.

The recipe for kisses in the Congressional Cook Book is simply:

Kisses, 1780 (Ten Broeck).

Whites of as many eggs as one wishes, beaten with powdered sugar till it stands alone; flavor; bake on white paper laid on a shingle.

Both these recipes are seeped with antiquity. Here is one that is old, though it dates only to 1911.

Cinnamon Bars.

Cream a pound of light brown sugar with 4 eggs for half an hour. Add ½ cup blanched almonds, shredded; the peel of one lemon, grated; a tablespoon cinnamon and a teaspoon ground cloves. Mix thoroughly and add a pound of flour. Roll out very thin, cut in bars and bake until brown.

What Today Means

"Pisces."

If March 2 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 8 to 9 a. m., from 2 to 3 p. m. and from 5 to 6 p. m. The danger periods are from 9:30 to to 10:30 a. m., from 3 to 4 p. m. and from 7 to 8 p. m.

If you were born on March 2 cultivate the habit of always being gracious. Courtesy is appreciated by everyone. The grouch never accomplishes anything easily, for he antagonizes those with whom he comes in contact. Rudeness is unpardonable, for there is seldom an occasion that justifies one in forgetting that they are a lady, or a gentleman. Politeness is the best indication of good breeding. You can always express your opinion in a vigorous and plainly spoken manner, if it need be, without having to resort to churlishness.

The child born on March 2, as it grows up, will be inclined to be flippant. As soon as this child can understand, impress upon it that flippancy indicates shallowness and impertinence.

Successful people born on March 2:

David Wooster, Revolutionary soldier.

Joel R. Poinsett, statesman.

Stephen Olin, educator.

Alexander R. Bullock, lawyer and editor.

"Read Me a Story, Mother!"

BEGINNING Monday, The Washington Post presents the adventures of "Blackie Bear" for the delight of junior readers of The Post.

Blackie Bear is a distinct triumph in the field of literature for juveniles. Children love animals and Blackie and his Creek friends have been created by a man who has been a life-time observer of animals and their appeal to children.

In addition, Blackie's experiences are those of the average boy and girl. The lessons growing out of his problems and troubles and pleasures are little masterpieces of moral truths in human nature as well as animal nature.

Much fun has been poked at "bed-time stories" by humorists of radio, theater and printed page. The jesting has found its most responsive audience, no doubt, among Mothers and Dads who grind their teeth in self-restraint as Junior requests some favored story be read that exasperatingly wends its namby-pamby course.

Adults familiar with the Blackie Bear stories admit they find Blackie's daily adventures of genuine interest. Mothers and Dads who wish to satisfy the inherent craving of the youngsters for "a story" will find Blackie Bear and the Creek folk a double-barreled pleasure.

Unique Restoration Is Bringing Lee Homestead in Virginia to Life Again

Money Innocent Women Vanish WithDepression

Big Sale of Brandeis' Book Shows They Now Want to Know Finance.

Among the missing since the depression is the American woman, who used to say in tones of pride, "Finances? I know nothing about such things."

That product of a prosperous age is virtually extinct today, and in her place is a woman with a keen grasp of economic problems and an intelligent curiosity about money matters.

Recently, "Other People's Money," a book on finance written by Associate Justice Louis D. Brandeis, of the United States Supreme Court, 20 years ago, was reprinted in a low-priced edition and 75,000 copies were sold in six weeks. The majority of the purchasers were women.

"I was amazed at the number of women who bought that book," said Sherman Mittell, editor of the Jacket Library. "So I made an investigation and brought some interesting facts to light.

"The majority of stockholders in large companies and the persons who have the most money in savings banks are women. While the country was in a prosperous condition and these women received their incomes regularly they didn't bother to think about money. They turned such matters over to the executives in the companies and asked no questions. But when banks began to fail, and checks stopped coming so regularly they began to wonder—and were determined to find out for themselves."

Mr. Mittell has edited the Jacket Library for the last two years, during which time more than 2,000,000 copies of familiar classics have been sold for 15 cents. He gave some illuminating facts about the literary tastes of women of today.

"Women are no longer so much interested in light, passing reading matter," he said. "They are turning more and more to the things that have endured the test of time. They are utilizing the old in the manner of the new."

Mr. Mittell said that requests for the low price classics come from both rural and industrial communities all over the country.

"'Alice in Wonderland' and Thomas Hardy's 'Under the Greenwood Tree' are most popular," he said. "It seems that women tire of the complexities of modern literature, and the constantly changing world around them, and seek relaxation in a simple story, almost pastoral in quality."

The Jacket Library, which is run without profit, purposes to bring the greater classics within the reach of everyone's purse. The publishers feel that the publication of these works fills a great need at the present time, when people have much time for reading, but little money with which to buy books.

Prince Works Way Up To Be Street Cleaner

Bucharest, Rumania, March 1 (U.P.). Sixteen years after the Bolshevik revolution, Prince Sergei Vladimir Vladimirovitsch of Russia had worked his way up to street cleaner today after starting as a part-time man.

Prince Sergei, who escaped from the Bolsheviks, was wielding a broom near a railway station when he heard a foreign tourist vainly trying to make a policeman understand him. The prince intervened with a bow and in Parisian French gave the tourist directions.

A bystander who saw the incident reported it, and the prince was put on the regular force.

Wine Education For Children Cuts Two Ways

"Teach Drinking as Art," Says Vintner; "Teach Peril," Says P.-T. A.

Repeal brought joy to the hearts of many long-thirsting Washingtonians. It also gave two widely separated groups a great educational task to perform.

The Parent-Teacher Association, fearing for the future of the Nation if youth is exposed to alcoholic temptations, is beginning a Nation-wide campaign to teach children the harmful effects of liquor. Wine dealers are equally certain that wine drinking is a fine art and that no one ever became a drunkard or suffered loss of health from drinking good liquors in moderation.

"Children should be taught the art of fine drinking, just as they are taught to appreciate good literature and music," said Edward Hull, president of the Hamilton Wine Shop yesterday. "In European countries children drink fine wines from the time they are 6 or 7 years old, and you never see a European disgustingly drunk as you have seen Americans during the age of prohibition."

Miss Clarice Wade, publicity secretary of the Parent-Teacher Association, said:

"The Parent-Teacher Association has gone on record as being inexorably opposed to exposing children to the evil effects of alcohol and narcotics. We are urging that children be educated so that they will recognize the terrible results of drinking alcoholic beverages.

"We believe that if the scientific facts showing the ill health and crime resulting from the use of these beverages are taught in the public schools that the problem of drunkenness will be solved."

"Children can be given light wines, such as claret and sauterne, at an early age," Mr. Hull said. "This does not injure their health and mental development in any way. It teaches them the art of drinking, and people who know this art never get really drunk.

"As for thinking that keeping little children away from drinks will keep them from drinking, it is absurd. Most of the drunkards I have known are people whose parents were teetotalers."

Vintage Price Understood Even When Diplomats Are Foregathered.

By Mildred Reed Bundy.

Fine vintage champagne was on the table between Senor Capt. Colon Eloy Alfaro, of Ecuador, and Sumner Welles, of the State Department. It was Repeal Day. Closely gathered throngs beamed their appreciation of this type of sociability in a hotel lounge. A knowing waiter smiled on the enjoyment of Mr. Welles and his friend from Ecuador.

"Those diplomats may not like this repeal so much when they learn that even though they bring their own wine there will be $2 for corkage," the wily servitor said.

Henry Morgenthau may be a bit dashed to meet a representative of the Moscrip Holstein Breeders Association of Minnesota, who is in Washington on business, related to agricultural financing. Morgenthau, known as a gentleman farmer, recently bought a bull from the Moscrip association. He felt the bull was not worth the $5,000 or so he paid for it and forced a refund on the price of the animal. The question now is how great a cooperative spirit the gentleman from the house of Moscrip will have in dealings with the Secretary of the Treasury.

A slant on how the world feels about women in public life comes from Mrs. Anna Dickie Olson, of Minnesota, probably the most widely known woman in her State. Mrs. Olson is now chairman of the National emergency board for Minnesota, the only woman chosen for such leadership in 48 States.

"Fourteen years ago when I attended the Jackson Day dinner in Washington as a candidate for the United States Senate I was beset by reporters," Mrs. Olson told friends. "But now there are so many women in political life that one woman working with 48 men is not noticed at all."

A Washington mother who deplores the night life of her gay son tried to check his late hours by purposely disabling the family roadster. After he had driven away one night in uncertain zigzag fashion, she secretly arranged with a friend to trace the car to its parking spot and remove a part of the car's vital works to prevent locomotion. The son and a friend merely pushed the car to a nearby motor agency and reported to his mother that the car was "only slightly out of order, mother." Beyond the mother's inconvenience in doing without her roadster, nothing has been accomplished, least of all a reformation in the conduct of the young man about town.

Two Spokesmen of Housewives Criticize NRA As Failing to Give Real Consumer Recognition

Home Purchasing Agents Are Declared Without Representation.

Women as purchasing agents for the American home should have full consumer interest recognition now lacking in the NRA.

Two women of distinct local and National prominence strongly voice the above criticism of the NRA in the current public hearings being held by that organization. They are Miss Lena Madesen Phillips, New York, president of the National Council of Women, and Mrs. John Boyle, jr., chairman of the Consumers' Council of Washington.

"My criticism is not of the American housewife," Miss Phillips said. "She is alive to her duty. My criticism is that almost nothing has been done to include her viewpoint as a consumer in the operation of the NRA. Overlooking the consumer-interest in National recovery is like trying to have a wedding without a bride."

"I am led, therefore, to ask, 'Does the consumer exist for the industry, or does the industry exist for the consumer?' The consumer exists as the goose with the golden egg, without rights to be considered, without a right, even information by which he might make an intelligent choice in buying."

In adition to asking that a more adequate and more militant consumer representation be given in the formation, change and administration of all codes, Miss Phillips would have the NRA take steps to develop machinery by which the consumer group may function.

She suggested that the vast number of clubs of men and women the country over be used as machinery for educating the consumer to what is going on. With comparatively little money and effort, this whole network could be used as stimulation to recovery and a check upon unfair practice, she pointed out. Consumer resistance could be turned into consumer promotion, she said.

Besides being president of the National Council of Women, Miss Phillips is international president of the Business and Professional Women's Clubs.

Mrs. John Boyle, jr., chairman of the Consumers' Council here, stating before the NRA hearing that she repreesnted through the many organizations included in the council approximately 150,000 consumers, urged as strongly as did Miss Phillips the need of consumer representation. She stressed the need of the NRA for the recognition of what she calls the "five and ten cent buyers."

"Women chosen for important positions in the NRA are for the most part women of wealth or of such extensive social activities as to render them unfit to represent the 'five and tne cent buyer,'" Mrs. Boyle later told a Post reporter.

"The mass of consumers do not care about the codes affecting luxury trades or industries. The mass of consumers cares not what jewelers may charge for diamonds or pearls. They do not care, really, what furriers may demand for mink coats, providing they can buy woolen coats at a reasonable price. Prices in the basic industries under the codes—such as cotton textiles, iron and steel, lumber, coal, woolen and rayon, canning, &c.—have in many instances advanced far faster than has purchasing power. Retail prices of cotton textile goods in the 'essential' class in Washington, increased from 19 to 56 per cent from March to November. Testimony of similar price increases has come from all parts of the country.

Does Consumer Exist for Industry or Vice Versa? Is Women's Query.

Mrs. Boyle's suggestions for providing consumer recognition are that the consumer be given direct representation upon every code authority in a basic industry, and that, when an industry is given authority in any way to set prices, or to prorate production, it be required to disclose its actual unit production costs and its financial set-up.

Among the organizations Mrs. Boyle represents as chairman of the Consumers' Council of Washington are the District Federation of Women's Clubs, the League of Women Voters, home and school associations, the Teachers' Union, the Central Labor Union, the Building Trades Council, the Typographical Union and others.

"I am primarily a housewife," Mrs. Boyle said. She lives at 3901 Ingomar street and is the mother of three children. For two years Mrs. Boyle has been aggressively interested in the school lunch project in Washington. She was among those who, as she expressed it, "sat on the doorstep of District school authorities until children fainting from hunger were given food."

Coeds to Be Escorts, To Youths at 'Prom'

Western Ontario Girls Also Delineate Ideal Male.

London, Ontario, March 1 (U.P.).—As a prelude to a coed prom at the University of Western Ontario tonight, when the men students will be placed under the limitations commonly reserved for girls, women students put their heads together to determine qualifications of the "ideal man." Their ideal in manhood is as follows:

He must have the physique of a 6-foot Spartan warrior and Greek athlete; weigh 172 pounds; have black, curly hair, a school girl complexion and no whiskers; be gentle in his parlor pastimes and useful at bridge and dancing; clever enough to support the girl who takes a chance on him and popular enough with other women to justify the "real girl's" choice—but careful how he shows it. Sporty tweeds are preferred as his raiment.

At tonight's prom the girl must supply the taxi and show her partner every courtesy and attention that is commonly afforded the female sex by their escorts.

Slanting Waistlines Decreed By Paris in Newest Fashions

Slender Women Favored by Spring Styles Offered in Smart Shops.

Paris, March 1 (AP). — A slanting waistline—up in the front and down in the back—has made its debut with spring styles, adding to feminine worries by making a slender waist more important than ever.

Sometimes the oblique waistline appears in frocks having tilted belts, again it is seen in suits whose waistlines rise to a decidedly higher line in front than in back.

Lucile Paray launched spring suits with high front skirt tops attached to blouses of contrasting color which accented the slanted line. Several models of soft black wool, worn with white pique vests or white organdy blouses, were designed with fitted jackets whose hiplength hems ended on the same oblique line higher in front, lower and flared in the back. A few were edged with silver fox in the back to call attention to the slanting line

The tendency to place furs below the waistline rather than above it marked a number of spring ensembles from the same house. Suits of pistachio green wool and spring coats of light blue wool were designed with three-quarter length sleeves cuffed in blue fox which touched a line near the hipbones when the arm was lowered. With coats in these light colored wools went simple slender frocks of the same material finished with leather belts in a contrasting hue.

Prints of a new variety—dark grounds splashed with colored lightning streaks or white dots and dashes—fashioned a number of ensembles designed for formal afternoon or informal evening wear. The frocks, designed with slightly oblique waistlines, had short cap sleeves often cut out to show a bit of white shoulder. Necklines rather high in front and low in the back and skirts about six inches from the ground. The wraps were three-quarter length coats or big sleeved coatees of the same fabric.

Flowered organdies, candy pink crepes and black chiffons fashioned spring evening frocks. A colorful frock of candy pink crepe built on slender lines appeared with a waist length cape bordered in white fox, while a diaphanous black chiffon was accompanied by a matching jacket whose sleeves were trimmed in swirls of black osprey feathers.

Most of the evening frocks were designed with fullness swept to the back.

Rural Routine of 200 Years Ago Will Make Stratford Hum

Northern Woman Conceived Idea of Reclaiming Ancestral Acres of Confederacy's Hero; Hall Rebuilt and Farm Activities Will Resume; How Kindly Fate Has Aided $250,000 Undertaking.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

The old Lee plantation is coming to life again.

Day by day fragments are being added to the living picture of Colonial life that is rapidly taking shape at "Stratford Hall," birthplace of Robert E. Lee in Westmoreland County, Va. Creators of this living picture are women from all over the United States who are striving to preserve the traditions, customs and history of the antebellum South.

Through the interest of these women, Stratford's mill will soon grind grain as it did 200 years ago. Preserves and jams will be made from the fruit of Stratford's orchards. Hams are even now being cured and smoked in Stratford's smokehouse.

The dominant theme of the restoration of the old Lee home is that the plantation shall occupy the same place in the life of the community that it did when Robert E. Lee spent his boyhood there. Its restorers are determined it shall not be a museum or lifeless memorial.

Farmers who live near Stratford will take their grain to the Lee mill as their grandfathers and great-grandfathers did. Visitors to the plantation may purchase hams, preserves, flour, and other products from the broad acres of Stratford. The money from these sales will be used for the upkeep of the mansion and fields.

Women from Maine to California are taking an interest in the work. Especially active is the District of Columbia chapter of the Robert E. Lee Memorial Foundation, of which Mrs. Casnova G. Lee is president. Among those aiding in the work are Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, Mrs. John Nance Garner, Mrs. William C. Eustis, Mrs. Cary T. Grayson, Mrs. Robert Worth Bingham, Mrs. Breckinridge Long and Mrs. Harry B. Hawes.

Northern Woman's Idea.

Although Robert E. Lee is naturally the South's particular idol, it was a woman from the North who conceived the idea of restoring his birthplace. Miss Ethel Armes, of Greenwich, Conn., long interested in Colonial homes, was traveling in Virginia in the summer of 1928, when she happened upon Stratford. She rushed back to Greenwich and laid her hopes for restoring the plantation before her friend, Mrs. Charles D. Lanier, daughter-in-law of Sidney Lanier, the Confederate poet.

From the beginning, believe these two women, a kindly fate has guided and watched over their efforts. Miss Armes called upon Mrs. Lanier late one afternoon concerning the Lee home. The morning of that day had been spent by Mrs. Lanier in looking over Sidney Lanier's papers. Among them she had found a copy of an address the poet had given in Macon, Ga., in which he had said he hoped a fitting memorial would some day be erected to Robert E. Lee.

Mrs. Lanier, inspired by her father-in-law's message and by Miss Armes' call, immediately enlisted the interest of Daughters of the Confederacy who live in Greenwich—a mere handful. Then she and Miss Armes went to Stratford. They planned to take an option on the plantation, in the wild hope they would be able to raise money with which to buy the place.

Price of $250,000 Set.

The first difficulty they encountered was the reluctance of Charles E. Stuart to part with Stratford. It had been owned by his family since it left the Lees' possession in 1825. While he readily admitted that he needed the money, he hated to sell the old plantation and finally named what he thought was a prohibitive price—$250,000.

Miss Armes and Mrs. Lanier promptly signed an option for $5,000. By July 19, 1928, they had succeeded in raising that amount through gifts from women all over the country. They took up the option. There remained a debt of $245,000 before they could own Stratford Hall and the 1,160 acres surrounding it.

After the first payment of $5,000 had been made, the work of organizing the Robert E. Lee Memorial Foundation began in earnest. Mrs. Lanier, in forming the organization of which she is now president, used the Mount Vernon Ladies Association as a model. A prominent woman in each State was asked to serve as a director. Other prominent women from coast to coast were asked to serve on committes, the board being composed of chairmen of these committees. Distinguished men, including President Roosevelt and Senators Byrd and Glass, of Virginia, became members of the national advisory board.

Woman Lends $115,000.

The foundation, realizing that it would need all of its energies and finance for restoring the mansion, barn and numerous small buildings, asked the Garden Club of Virginia in 1929 to assist in restoring the gardens. Mrs. Fairfax Harrison, of Washington and Belvoir, Va., was chosen to take charge of this work for the Garden Club.

Not all of the problems were so easily solved. In the midst of the economic depression the foundation was in danger of losing Stratford. A large note and interest on the mortgage of $115,000 had to be met. There was no money in the treasury. Again fate intervened. An anonymous woman offered the foundation a loan of $115,000, without security or interest. Now a special funds committee, headed by Mrs. William Cabell Bruce, wife of former Senator Bruce, of Maryland, is endeavoring to pay back that debt.

The exterior of Stratford Hall, with the exception of the front steps, has undergone slight change since it was built in 1725-29 by Thomas Lee, great-grandfather of Robert E. Lee. The foundation found that the interior of the house and surrounding grounds required the most work, time and money.

Research for Authenticity.

For 200 years the house has been continuously occupied. Each generation has wrought some change. Partitions have been removed or added; fireplaces have been bricked in; rococo chandeliers have been installed. But gradually the rooms are returning to the appearance they bore in the years from 1729 to 1800. The garden is being restored to the period of 1790.

A tremendous amount of research has preceded every change made in the garden and mansion in order to have the restoration authentic to the smallest detail. A conference has been held before the driving of each nail, before the placing of each hand-made brick.

Research is being carried on in England by Mrs. Bingham, wife of the Ambassador to Great Britain, in an effort to learn what furniture the early Lees had shipped over from England. When Stratford is refurnished by the foundation fine old pieces typical of the years from 1729 to 1800 will be selected. Only a very small amount of the original Lee furniture is still in existence.

The restoration fund will benefit from a lecture to be given next Wednesday at the Mayflower by the District of Columbia Committee of the Robert E. Lee Memorial Foundation. Slides of lovely old gardens in Virginia will be shown.

Women Voters Plan Convention

Problems of Emergency Will Be Topics at Boston Sessions in April.

At the five-day convention of the National League of Women Voters in Boston April 23 to 28, problems of the present National emergency and their relation to the policies and measures advocated by the league will be discussed.

Miss Belle Sherwin, president of the league, announces plans today for the convention from headquarters at 726 Jackson place. She summons league members to convention discussion "of the challenge of the National emergency" and the woman voter's contribution to the current "history-making developments of Government and of individual life in this country."

Nationally prominent persons will take part in special discussions on "Standards of Public Administration," "Economic Planning by Government," "The Present and Future of Financing Public Education" and "Government at Work on League Measures."

Delegates from 39 States, from the District of Columbia and from Hawaii are expected to go to Boston, numbering in all several hundred. Since the league was organized in 1920 this is the first National meeting in a New England State. Two days preceding the opening of the convention on Wednesday, April 25, will be devoted to departmental conferences to study and determine the 1934-1936 program.

Work Started On Substitute For CWA Jobs

Interior, Agriculture, U. S. Relief Study Details of Revised Aid.

(Associated Press.)

Responding to Presidential ideas, the Interior and Agriculture Departments and the relief administration set to work yesterday to make the unemployed self-sustaining when the CWA expires. Most of the machinery necessary to carry out the program outlined by President Roosevelt already is in existence, officials said.

They are working on the details necessary in behalf of distressed families in rural areas and those in single industry communities, where there is no hope of future employment.

The Department of Agriculture and the relief administration are exploring the best methods of caring for rural populations. The method that will be followed probably will be to find some way to place these people on small farms, where they can raise diversified crops, thus suppying most of their own food.

To Supplement Own Efforts.

In order to give them money, plans are being studied for distribution of jobs on highways and in the National and State parks and forests and other public works in agricultural communities

Such persons probably would be given a certain number of days' work each year to provide them with the necessary cash to supplement food raised on their farms.

Advocates of the plan hope eventually such people may be settled permanently in rural sections and that small industries may be developed to supply them cash while they have land sufficient to raise gardens and necessary foodstuffs.

The plan for caring for the unemployed in cities and towns was described at the relief administration as job assurance rather than insurance.

Public works of various kinds, similar to those operated under the CWA at present, will be used to supply work for not more than six months.

Gradual Shift Planned.

While the shift from the CWA to the new plan is expected to be made gradually during the next nine weeks, officials pointed out that it was not scheduled to go into effect fully until May 1.

It was said the plan will not do away with the emergency relief lists on which are many unemployable persons due to age, illness or other reasons.

Hopkins estimated that during the next year 3,000,000 families would remain on the emergency relief list. Some now on civil works pay rolls will have to be returned to relief lists until they can be cared for permanently, it was explained.

In some of the large cities employment has picked up markedly, but still the problem is so great that civil works forces generally are being maintained. The only heavy cuts in civil works employment in industrial cities have been made in Michigan, where employment in automobile factories has been booming for the last six weeks.

French Motor Stock Drop Perils Franc

Paris, March 1 (AP).—A startling drop today on the bourse of Citroen stock, France's greatest automobile industry, was attributed to heavy financial pressure. The shares fell 75 points, one-fifth of their value, from 360 to 285, on rumors of difficulties which financial quarters said had been bridged.

The Citroen drop brought down most of the list and weakened even the franc.

Playground Design By Wyeth Approved

Approval of the design for the Bloomingdale Playground field house in McMillan Park was announced yesterday by the Fine Arts Commission. It was executed by Nathan C. Wyeth, municipal architect, after the commission had rejected a design submitted last January by Maj. J. D. Arthur, jr., District engineer.

According to present plans the field house will be located in the west side of the park and will not encroach upon the mound area surrounding the park's memorial fountain. It will not be surrounded by a fence, in keeping with the commission's recommendations expressed when the first design was turned down.

Crowd Storms Court to Hear Dr. Wynekoop

Doctor - Daughter Relates Discovery of Slain Girl's Body.

Chicago, March 1 (AP).—With lips trembling, Catherine Wynekoop, physician-daughter of Dr. Alice Lindsay Wynekoop, charged with the murder of her daughter-in-law, Rheta, testified in her mother's defense today that she had heard Rheta make a threat which indicated she contemplated suicide.

Spectators who again today stormed the courtroom, sat silent as the 25-year-old physician, told for the first time the sequence of dramatic incidents after comely Rheta's body was found drenched in blood on the operating table in the gloomy West Side home of her mother.

Dr. Catherine told of a visit to Rheta the Sunday before the young wife's death.

She said Rheta was crying with unhappiness over neglect by her husband, Earle Wynekoop, brother of Catherine.

She said Rheta told her she would "do something Earle would be sorry for."

Q.—What did you tell Rheta?

A.—I told her that if she ever did anything like she was threatening to it would break mother's heart.

Dr. Catherine's appearance as a defense witness presaged the calling of her mother to the witness box. Indications had been that the mother might take the stand today, and interest flared high as spectators swarmed into the criminal courts building in an attempt to gain entrance to the courtroom.

The aged defendant probably will take the stand tomorrow. Throughout her daughter's testimony, she sat nervously toying with a water glass, her pallid face constantly lifted to watch her daughter.

Dr. Catherine, looking younger than her years and decidedly unprofessional in a navy blue silk dress, was a deathly white when she took the stand.

Dr. Catherine said she first learned of Rheta's death when her mother telephoned her at the Cook County Children's Hospital with which she is associated.

Arriving home, she said she joined Miss Emid Hennessey, a boarder, and Thomas Ahern, an undertaker, and went to the basement, the scene of the tragedy.

Q. What did you do when you went downstairs?—A. I was the first one to enter the operating room. I saw Rheta's body lying on the operating table, on her left side.

Q. Did you see the bullet wound?—A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did you have any conversation with Mr. Ahern about calling the police?—A. I told him that mother had asked me to call the coroner, but that I had not. He then called the police himself.

France Stands Firm Against Arming Reich

Doumergue Maps Reply to New Proposal by Great Britain.

Paris, March 1 (AP).—Premier Doumergue's foreign affairs directory held out today against a proposed four-power treaty permitting Germany to rearm and demanded guarantees that any new arms level be observed.

England and Italy, it was understood, were near an accord to put a lid on their armaments and let Germany rearm as a result of visits to Berlin and Rome of Capt. Anthony Eden, British lord privy seal and leading arms negotiator.

Premier Doumergue will give a definite French reply in a note to London in two or three days.

Capt. Eden will confer with American Ambassador at Large Norman H. Davis, who arrived in England today, on the American attitude regarding late arms developments, particularly the reported decision of France, Italy, Germany and Great Britain to drop further talks on the subject for a few months.

Diplomatic circles here expected Mr. Davis to say that the United States wants disarmament, but that Washington is letting Europe fight it out.

Amendment Vote Blocked.

Frankfort, Ky., March 1 (AP).—Action on the child labor amendment was blocked in the 1934 Kentucky General Assembly today, when the Senate rules committee voted unanimously not to report the resolution calling for ratification.

You want some things strong ..but when it comes to cigarettes you want them mild

SOME folks like their tea or coffee strong enough to hold up a house . . . and maybe that's all right.

But most smokers, we find, like a mild cigarette. That may be because people smoke more nowadays. Or perhaps they've found that in a milder cigarette like Chesterfield they get more of the aroma and taste.

Milder doesn't mean namby-pamby. To Chesterfield smokers it means a cigarette that's mild and yet satisfies.

School Board Protests 27 Rum Licenses

Asks Denial of Permits to Sell Within 400 Feet of Buildings.

Discrimination Charged by Merchants; First Hearing Today.

Learning that 27 individuals with business establishments within 400 feet of school buildings have applied to the District liquor control board for licenses to sell alcoholic beverages, the Board of Education yesterday filed a formal protest, asking that the applications be denied.

Henry Gilligan, who has represented the board at hearings on the District liquor law, will appear before the liquor board at 1:30 p. m. today, when the first application of a merchant in a school neighborhood is considered.

The applicant is Louis Kraft, who has a business at 2100 Eighteenth street northwest, within 400 feet of the Morgan School. Kraft is expected to contend that he should be granted a license because he is located on a main business thoroughfare where other merchants are selling liquor a short distance away. The Morgan School is on V street between Champlain and Eighteenth streets.

Hearings Tomorrow.

Two applications will be heard by the liquor board tomorrow from operators of establishments in the Central High School neighborhood. One of these is on Thirteenth street northwest, across the street from the school, and the other is at Fourteenth and Clifton streets northwest, more than 400 feet from the school.

Both these applications will be opposed by the Board of Education and the Columbia Heights Citizens Association. The chief argument against the applicant beyond the 400 feet limit will be a clause in the covenant to the deed of the property prohibiting the sale of liquor, it was learned.

"I hope the liquor board will not grant a license to any establishment anywhere near a school building, leave alone 400 feet," Mr. Gilligan said. "Children frequent these stores to buy sandwiches, candy and soft drinks, and there is every reason why they should be protected from surroundings where liquor is sold."

Discrimination Charged.

The Board of Education, prior to enactment of District liquor regulations, went on record opposing sale of liquor "anywhere near a school," but no particular distance was specified. Further action was taken by the board yesterday when Harry O. Hine, secretary to the board, was instructed to examine the 987 applicants for licenses to determine if any of their locations are within 400 feet of schools.

Upon discovery that 27 of the applicants were within 400 feet of schools, Mr. Hine appraised Acting Superintendent of Schools Robert L. Haycock, who in turn notified Dr. Hayden Johnson, president of the board, and the formal protest was drawn up.

No sooner was the protest submitted than the liquor sale applicants filed objections. They charge that they are victims of discrimination because other merchants in the same neighborhoods can sell liquor.

District liquor regulations, they point out, permit establishments within 400 feet of schools. The Board of Education is asking that all such establishments, whether or not they were in operation prior to the law, be denied licenses.

2 Freed, 3 Held After Inquiry In D. C. Crashes

Grand Jury and Coroners' Verdicts to Decide Fate of Trio.

Two drivers were exonerated, two were held for a coroner's jury, and a fifth for grand jury action yesterday, following two coroner's inquests and a grand jury inquiry into recent traffic deaths.

Earl Bishop, recently exonerated of the fatal shooting of his wife after a District grand jury had conducted an investigation, was again freed by that body yesterday after an inquiry into the circumstances surrounding the death of Peter Harris, whose automobile collided with Bishop's.

The two cars crashed at Fourteenth street and Maryland avenue northeast, January 21, and Harris died shortly afterward. The grand jury decided Bishop was not to blame for the accident.

Two motorists were held for a coroner's jury in the death of Mrs. Mary E. Mills, 36, of 2704 Sixth street northeast, in Emergency Hospital Wednesday from injuries received in an accident between a machine driven by her husband, John E. Mills, 34, and an oil truck, police were told. Mills and Charles P. Adams, 25, of 1458 Columbia road northwest, driver of the truck, were ordered held.

Frank Kuter, of Passaic, N. J., a member of the Civilian Conservation Corps, was held for the grand jury in the death of Walter Selby, 24, of 3120 G street southeast. Selby was killed February 17 when the machine in which he was riding collided with Kuter's car at Fifteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue southeast.

The jury decided Becker W. Howe, 56, of Takoma Park, Md., died of "natural causes." He suffered a heart attack Wednesday at Fifteenth street and New York avenue northwest, collapsing against the moving taxi of Lawrence D. Smith, 28, of 1225 Oak street northeast. Smith was exonerated.

Safe Boat Operation Discussed by Lawton

Boating is "a sport where there aren't any traffic cops and your lives, and those of others, depend on your knowledge of and obedience to the rules," J. E. Lawton said in an address at Central High School last night under the auspices of the Potomac River Squadron of the United States Power Squadrons, Inc., a National organization of yachtsmen.

Albert's Condolence Folio Sent to House

The Government Printing Office yesterday forwarded to the House of Representatives a black leather folio bearing Congress' condolences to the Belgian government on the death of King Albert I.

Engraved and bound under the supervision of George H. Carter, public printer, the somber folio is the first to be ordered by the House for such a purpose in many years. It is about 18 inches long and a foot wide. The resolution will be mailed to Belgium.

King Seeking D. C. Gambling Law Changes

Strict Provisions Aim Primarily at Old Number Game.

Possession of tickets, slips or cards connected with gambling games is made evidence of intent to sell or negotiate them under provisions of an antigambling bill for the District, introduced in the Senate yesterday by Senator King (Democrat), Utah, chairman of the Senate District Committee.

The bill was prepared by the United States District Attorney's office and its passage was requested by Leslie C. Garnett, district attorney. It is aimed especially at the so-called numbers game.

A maximum fine of $1,000 or three years' imprisonment, or both, is provided.

Search warrants could be issued by United States commissioners as well as by police courts under another provision. Possession of a gaming table or other device is made evidence of intention to use or permit its use on the part of the lessee or occupants of the building in which such devices are found. Authority to seize books and papers on search warrants also is broadened under the bill.

Unwanted Babe To Be Buried

Abandoned Waif's Mother Sought; Kind Offers of Burial Made.

While District authorities seek the mother of John Doe, jr., four months' old baby, who died at Gallinger Hospital Wednesday, at least three Washington people have offered to see the waif properly buried.

Mrs. Rudy O'Gene, of 623 C street southwest, has offered to provide a grave site and A. J. Sardo, local undertaker, has declared he would donate a complete funeral.

After hearing of the child's death Wednesday Mrs. Daisy Delaney, 1514 V street southeast, offered to provide a funeral from her home for the baby.

Mrs. Delaney had also declared that the mother of the baby could come to its funeral and not have her identity revealed, if she so desired.

The baby was abandoned recently in a downtown theater, its mother leaving it with a matron while she "went across the street to get some milk." She never came back.

Four Indicted By Grand Jury In Bank Holdup

Second True Bill Returned in Mechanics Robbery Last April.

The District grand jury yesterday indicted four men for allegedly robbing the Washington Mechanics Savings Bank, Eighth and G streets northwest, of $7,639 last April.

They are Edward Wagner, John Joseph Barr, John Carroll and Isidor Weiman. A fifth, Spencer Walden, is serving a long sentence imposed when he entered a plea of guilty several months ago.

The indictment returned yesterday supersedes one filed by the last grand jury, in which four other men were accused of the same robbery. Subsequent investigation by police demonstrated that the four named in the prior indictment were innocent and charges against them were dropped. Walden was named in the first paper.

The bank was robbed by a group of armed gunmen, who with sawed-off shotguns terrorized several bank customers. They scooped up all the cash in sight and fled in a waiting automobile.

Deficit Ended In Brentwood

Town Still Awaits Share of Gasoline Tax Fund; Delay Is Handicap.

The Brentwood, Md., general fund deficit has been wiped out and a balance of $440 is now credited to the fund, announces E. W. Baker, town clerk.

Although the State Road Commission recently wrote that the town's share of the gasoline tax fund, $2,205, is available, it has not been received, Baker said.

The council voted to keep the town's drainage system and make emergency road repairs.

Because of the delay in receiving the fund the town has been financially embarrassed and many of the conveniences afforded the residents have been eliminated. Although trash collections have not been resumed, one collection will be made Monday to relieve the situation.

Lindbergh Kidnap Hunt 2 Years Old

Detectives Still Seeking Clews in Tragedy.

New York, March 1 (AP).—Two years ago tonight, the world gasped. Charles A. Lindbergh, jr., was kidnaped. Seventy-two days later, the baby's body, buried in a shallow grave, was found near its famous parents' Sourland Mountain estate, and a relentless search for the slayers started.

Today, picked detectives are still engaged in tracing clews, searching for the mysterious "John" who was paid $50,000 ransom by the baby's father.

The case is in the hands of the Department of Justice.

A $25,000 reward, offered by the New Jersey Legislature, awaits the person or persons who apprehend the slayer.

House to Fix Return of Pay On '5-5' Basis

President Would Have Power to Restore Final Third.

Veterans' Benefit Seen as Provocation for Floor Fight.

Restoration of 5 per cent of Government salaries effective February 1, and another 5 per cent effective July 1, probably will be voted by the House next week when it receives from the Appropriations Committee the independent offices appropriation bill.

The President would be authorized to restore the remaining third of the 15 per cent cut from salaries if living costs rose to 1928 levels during the next fiscal year under the program on which leaders have determined.

Senate provisions permitting automatic and administrative promotions, within the limit of appropriations, also is believed likely to meet approval. The Borah amendment, limiting restoration to salaries of $6,000 and under, is expected to be stricken out.

The so-called "pay freeze" affecting the Army, Navy and Marine Corps, Coast and Geodetic Survey, Coast Guard and Public Health Service, recommended by the Administration, also will remain in the bill, it is beleved.

Battle on Veterans' Benefits.

The battle will be over veterans' benefits, with Administration leaders opposing the Steiwer-McCarran and other Senate amendments virtually restoring to the Government rolls the veterans stricken off under the economy law.

The Administration plan is to seek adoption of the amendments proposed in the Senate by Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), South Carolina. Senator Byrnes had charge of the bill on the Senate floor and his proposals were said to have the approval of the President.

A particularly sharp fight is expected over benefits for Spanish War veterans and their dependents. The Senate provided for restoration of payments to them at the rate of 90 per cent. The Administration offer was for 75 per cent maximum.

Speaker Rainey sent the much changed bill to the appropriations committee under a House rule which has been so seldom employed that members and employes of the House could not recall its previous use. The speaker's action was taken to head off a battle on the floor and in conference between the two bodies, in the course of which it was feared the Administration program would be overridden.

Just when the bill will be reported out of committee again has not been determined.

Cost Being Estimated.

Veterans Administration and budget bureau experts have been put at work analyzing the Senate amendments to see what they may be expected to cost the Government in the course of the next year. When their figures are complete, action by the committee is expected.

Senator Frederick W. Steiwer (Republican), Oregon, a leader in the fight for the veterans in the Senate, made public a summary of the amendments which showed, he said, that the cost of those adopted would be only $55,504,000 more than those proposed by Senator Byrnes as acceptable to the Administration.

Senator Steiwer placed the total cost at $118,253,700. The amendments proposed by Senator Byrnes, he said, would have cost $63,749,000.

Five of the amendments adopted would not increase the cost to the Government, he said, listing them as those providing for hospitalization and domiciliary care in certain cases; permitting veterans eligible to benefits to participate in decisions with respect to veterans' claims; changing name of service-connected benefits from pension to compensation; providing benefits shall not be retroactive, and prohibiting reduction in benefits in cases of blindness.

How Figures Differ.

The other amendments, together with their estimated costs, were listed as follows: Restoring service-connection to World War veterans where service-connection was denied by special review boards, and restoring former rates of compensation in all service-connected cases, $44,933,000; restoring Spanish War veterans and dependents at 90 per cent of rate paid March 19, 1933, $69,564,000; restoration of certain emergency officers to rolls, $2,942,000; restoration of veterans injured in Administration hospitals or in training $25,700; requiring Administration to recognize total and permanent disability where disability has been found by competent court, $700,000; payment of term insurance, $59,000; double pension for dependents of men who died on the Akron, the Shenandoah and the J-3, $30,000, a total of $118,253,700.

Amendments proposed by Senator Byrnes were set forth as follows: Temporary restoration at rate of 75 per cent pending appeal of veterans whose disabilities were ruled nonservice-connected by special boards, $10,900,000, for the first year; increased safeguards for presumptive cases, $2,0000,000; restoration of Spanish War veterans and dependents to roll at rate of 75 per cent $50,849,000.

Code Violations By Fuel Station Owners Probed

District Retailers Said to Be Ignoring Labor Rules of NRA.

Prosecution of violators of NRA labor provisions by gasoline station operators in the District is being speeded by investigators of the local petroleum code committee, it was announced yesterday. The group met Wednesday.

Some dealers, according to the committee, were found to be working their men longer than the six-day, 48-hour limit, which, the committee stated, works hardships on other dealers trying to live up to the code. The Department of Justice is being supplied with evidence of these violations almost daily and swift prosecution is expected to follow, the committee stated.

All gasoline contracts for delivery in tank trucks, signed since August 19, have been outlawed by Secretary of the Interior Ickes, and owners of truck fleets, delivery cars and buses, who have felt themselves bound by such contracts, are free to deal with any supplier they choose, the committee asserted.

Illegal rebates and discounts given to retail purchasers of gasoline are causing some dealers much worry, the committee pointed out, as the group's special investigators are gathering evidence of these acts. The slowness with which certain large oil companies act to correct abuses and code violations was attacked by committee members.

A stabilization committee for the District will be appointed soon for the purpose of setting equitable prices for gasoline deliveries in tank trucks, the committee announced.

Engel Receives Term in Jail

Ball Club President Is Held in Contempt of D. C. Court.

Joseph W. Engel, scout for the Washington baseball club and president of the Chattanooga (Tenn.) Southern Association baseball club, yesterday was ordered to serve a 15-day sentence in jail for contempt of the District Supreme Court.

Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue issued the sentence when he was informed that Engel was in arrears $1,800 in alimony payments to his wife, Mrs. Mary P. Engel, of this city. The couple separated in 1930, under a limited divorce, and Engel was ordered to pay $300 a month.

Engel was not in court when sentence was passed. Deputy marshals were ordered to arrest and incarcerate him should he be located in the District. He is, however, believed to be in the South. Release from the order can be obtained by payment of the alimony.

Motor Company Safe Yields $223 to Thugs

Smashing the combination from an office safe of the Handley Motor Co., 3730 Georgia avenue northwest, thieves yesterday escaped with $223.

The cracksmen gained entrance by the use of a duplicate key, police were told. The building was ransacked.

Snowbank Saves Life Of Worker in Fall

Samuel C. Johnson, 29, of 731 Sixth street northwest, a CWA worker, probably owes his life today to a snowbank.

Losing his balance as he swept a roof at the National Training School for Boys on Bladensburg road northwest yesterday, Johnson fell 50 feet into the snow. He was taken to Casualty Hospital.

Massachusetts Kills Child Labor Proposal

Boston, March 1 (AP).—Massachusetts took final action against ratification of the child labor amendment to the Federal Constitution today as the State Senate accepted adverse committee reports on several petitions seeking its ratification.

The House had already accepted the adverse reports.

Elevator Probe Is Voted Down By House Body

Investigation at Office Building Is Held Unnecessary.

The House Rules Committee yesterday voted to table the resolution offered by Representative Charles Kramer (Democrat), of California, providing for investigation of the elevator system of the New House Office Building.

Speaker Rainey told the committee he believed the safety of other elevators in the Capitol and the Old House Office Building should be made certain. Experts of the Bureau of Standards reported they had carefully inspected the elevators of the New Office Building at the time they were installed. The elevators, they said, were safe and were equipped with latest safety devices, including apparatus which brings the lifts to a stop whenever they fall too fast.

Safety of the elevators was brought into question when one slipped on February 22 and carried Miss Reba Doughton, daughter of Representative Robert L. Doughton, of North Carolina, to the sub-basement. Neither Miss Doughton nor the operator was injured.

Replacement of nine old elevators in the Capitol is provided for in a measure pending in the House.

"Not Such a Goose," directed by Mrs. Fern D. Schneider, will be played by Florence Stretch, Elsie Bogue, Kathleen Carson, Robert Hill and Carleton Smith. The caste in "The Telegram" includes Mary Yocum, Margaret Ellison, Alf Jansson, Sylvia Steves and Hugh Cramer, directed by Ray Kurtz.

"Two Gentlemen of the Burnt Cork," a short skit, will be presented between the two plays. A vocal trio, composed of Gladys Hunt and Mildred Frizzel, will furnish special music.

Three Indicted In Gaming Case

Garnett Pushes Drive to Eliminate Gambling in Washington.

Three men were indicted by the District grand jury yesterday on charges of permitting gaming and setting up a gaming table, lending force to District Attorney Leslie C. Garnett's recently inaugurated drive against gambling in Washington.

Those indicted were Walter R. Schmitt, 36; Louis Newman, 37, and Rudolph E. Sutton, 38. All were declared to have been arrested in a raid conducted by Lieut. George M. Little, vice squad chief, at 1746 Columbia road northwest.

Since the drive against gaming was initiated approximately 200 persons have been arrested as Government witnesses and forced to post bond for their appearance in court to testify.

About a dozen principals have been seized in the raids, all conducted by Lieut. Little.

Labor-I. C. C. Building Row Up to Green

Cement Finishers, Wood Workers to Abide by His Decision.

Long Controversy Has Prevented Finishing Structure.

It's now up to William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, to decide the fate of the Labor-Interstate Commerce Commission Building which probably would be occupied now but for recurrent jurisdictional disputes between rival unions.

At 2 p. m. today Green will hear arguments of cement finishers and carpenters, whose conflicting claims over laying of mastic tile floors precipitated a strike two weeks ago, and then decide which trade shall do the work. Both unions agreed on appointment of Green as arbiter, after other conciliatory efforts failed, and will accept the edict as final.

Meanwhile, the Plasterers' International Union, which includes cement finishers, has released from obligation the trades that struck in sympathy, J. M. Miles, vice president, said last night. This means that about 250 iron workers, plasterers, steamfitters and other skilled mechanics will be back on the job this morning or Monday at the latest.

This afternoon's meeting will be attended by Michael J. Colleran, president of the International Plasterers' Union; Harry Rothery, the union's local business agent; Henry Blumenberg, representative of the Carpenters' International; Albert Caya, carpenters' agent, and Miles. And, of course, Mr. Green and possibly Michael J. McDonough, president of the A. F. of L. building trades department and construction code authority.

Will Stand by Decision.

James Stewart & Co., contractors for the $10,000,000 job which has been wracked and torn by union troubles almost since work started in July, 1932, arranged for Green to act as arbiter. Edward A. Burnap, superintendent, said his firm will abide unconditionally by the labor chieftain's decision.

The carpenters and a few other trades, numbering about 200 workmen, according to Burnap, remained on the job when cement finishers and allied labor groups walked out February 14, because carpenters had been put to work on the disputed floors two days earlier.

The strikers are said to have threatened to cease work on every Stewart job in the country and shut down operations on every building being erected in the Federal triangle.

No authority exists for the positive settlement of building trades disputes which involve carpenters, bricklayers or electricians because those unions are not members of the A. F. of L. building trades department. The electricians' local here, however, is affiliated with the Washington Building Trades Council, a unit in the national department.

Another controversay, which is seriously delaying completion of the city postoffice addition, is the one between carpenters and elevator constructors over installation of mail conveyors.

Settlement Is Remote.

Inquiry yesterday at the office of B-W Construction Co., contractors, disclosed there is no prospect of a settlement. Not one piece of the machinery, which is as essential to a postoffice as the works is to a watch, has been put in, although it has been on hand and ready for installation since last fall.

If Green is successful in arbitrating the carpenter-cement finisher squabble, giving Miss Perkins and the commerce commissioners a floor to walk on in their offices, there will still remain the radiator inclosure and window mold disputes.

Maryland Upset, 45-37, by Generals in Southern Conference Play

Duke Defeats V. M. I. by 35 to 14

Washington-Lee Team Runs Up Advantage of 22-14 at Half.

Cadets Are Unable to Cope With Play of Blue Devil Five.

Tourney Scores.
Washington and Lee, 45; Maryland, 37.
Duke, 35; V. M. I., 14.
North Carolina, 27; Virginia, 18.

MEMORIAL STADIUM, Raleigh, N. C., March 1 (Spl.).—The Washington and Lee Generals, underdogs as play began, outclassed the University of Maryland for 40 minutes here this afternoon to win the first game of the thirteenth annual Southern Conference basket ball tournament, 45 to 37. In the second game Duke strode into the semifinals by defeating V. M. I.'s Cadets, 35 to 14.

Gov. J. C. B. Ehringhaus of North Carolina tossed the ball to formally open play, and a moment later the game was under way between Maryland and Washington and Lee.

Referee Gummy Proctor tossed the ball at center and Maryland took the tip-off, but failed to register, as both teams showed extreme nervousness. A minute passed before Rufus Vincent, of Maryland, looped the first goal of the tourney, and a moment later Bob Fields made good a free throw called against Bernie Buscher, of Maryland.

Maryland Leads, 14-13.

The teams gradually settled down, alternating goals and free throws for a while. Maryland was leading, 14 to 13, when the entire General quintet began to run wild. Pette, Smith, Sawyers, Smith and Ellis, pot-shotting from all points, put Washington and Lee ahead, 22 to 14, even before the half was up.

As play began for the second period, Sawyers and Smith continued, giving the Generals a 10-point lead. Bernie Buscher, Alton Buscher, Chase and Willis then swung into action, however, and climbed to within three points of the Generals, making the score: Maryland, 27; Washington and Lee, 30.

The Virginians, with only a 50-50 record for the season in conference play, were outclassing the Old Liners, who had lost but seven conference starts. In the final minutes, Sawyers and Smith "froze" the ball until Maryland became desperate, and in an exchange of fouls and goals the score was 42-33, with two minutes to play.

Smith, W. & L. center, went out on personal fouls after a beautiful game. Willis made 2 free throws for Maryland, Rabbitt made it 2 more from the floor, Ellis got a free point and Sawyers followed him with a basket, to end the game with the count 45 to 37 for the Virginians.

In the Duke-V. M. I. game the Cadets drew first blood with a field goal by Bill Downey, but a free point by Connie Mack, jr., and a goal by Jim Thompson followed. V. M. I. got a 5-to-3 lead on a 1-pointer by Downey and a goal by Travers, a pretty, long one. Guarding was close, and it took 9 minutes for Duke to go ahead, 7 to 5, on baskets by Weaver nad Mack.

The Cadets then pulled up. Downey and Travers delivered a single and double, and the score was 9 to 8. Weaver and Mack were called for holding simultaneously. V. M. I. failed at the free tries and Duke sent in an entire new squad—Kunkle, Polack, May, Ferguson and Hendrickson. Duke led, 13 to 10, at the intermission.

Close Guarding Continues.

As play was resumed Duke's starters returned to the floor, and the extremely close guarding continued, neither club scoring for five minutes. Finally, Sammy Bell raised one from his knees to make it Duke 15, V. M. I. 10. Herb Thompson followed suit and Bell repeated, and Duke led, 19-10, while V. M. I.'s desperate long tries failed to drop.

The Cadets could not match Duke's fast pace.

Mack scored twice, and after Weaver got one Coach Cameron sent his relief men back in. Hendrickson got a free point and a basket, and Watkins got a free point with the final whistle, with the score standing 35-14 for Duke.

Nostril-to-Nostril in Sensational Six-Horse Surge to the Wire

The lucky photographer who snapped the above picture caught the daddy of all finishes at the Melbourne, Australia, track, where six horses are pictured thundering down to the wire in a race in which the breadth of a hand separated the money horses.

Heurich Reds Play Rinaldi Sunday

Sweeney, Radice, Streeks, Goldblatt to Oppose Crack Pro Five.

MEMORIES of stirring battles waged by the old Anacostia Eagles bestir themselves in the minds of basket ball fans as Heurich's Reds and Rinaldi Tailors taper off for their game Sunday in the George Washington U. gym. The game will start at 3:30 o'clock, preceded at 2:30 o'clock by a preliminary attraction.

Joe Sweeney, he of the barrel stave legs who did everything but make the ball talk with the Eagles; Dick Streeks, Julie Radice and Jake Goldblatt, all veteran hoopsters, will grace the Rinaldi line-up. Radice, just a trifle stouter each year, was one of the most proficient block-play artists of the high schools while at Eastern, and later starred at Maryland. Goldblatt performed at Tech High School and Streeks is a product of the Eagles.

A most important cog in the Rinaldi machine, however, is Bob Taylor, 6-foot 5-inch 200-pound center, around whom the attack is built. Taylor is the team's most prolific scorer, a deadly shot and good jumper. He is just recovering from a mild attack of influenza, but will be ready for Sunday's important fracas.

Bozie Berger, Heurich's high-powered forward, is to make his final court appearance of the season in this game, as Monday he leaves for New Orleans, site of the Cleveland Indians' baseball training camp.

Ohio State Delays Schmidt's Naming

Recommended, However, for Coaching Job.

Columbus, Ohio, March 1 (AP).—Although unanimously recommended by the advisory committee to the Board of Athletic Control, the signing of Francis A. Schmidt of Texas Christian University as head football coach at Ohio State, was delayed today by the board.

It was believed, however, the Texas coach would be offered a contract within a day or two.

Weeks ago it was decided by the board that any coach must have the unanimous support of the 11-man board of control. At the executive session today, it was understood one member of the board advanced the name of C. A. West, coach at the University of North Dakota, as a likely candidate.

Klein, Cubs to Camp.

Chicago, March 1 (U.P.).—Chuck Klein, National League batting champion and former Phillies' outfielder, officially joined the Chicago Cubs tonight, when he left with Manager Charlie Grimm and eight other players for the Catalina Island training camp. The Cubs gave $100,000 and three players for Klein last winter.

"That's the fellow we believe will win the pennant for us," said Grimm as he nodded toward Klein at the station, where several hundred fans gathered.

Y Needs Game.

Because of a cancellation, the Y. M. C. A. Big Five basket ball team wants a game for tonight in its own gymnasium. Call M. De Gast at National 8250.

Boxing Team Meets.

The Takoma Northern boxing team will meet at 7 o'clock tonight at the Takoma Firehouse.

What a Weighing-In Is This

By Paul Gallico.

MIAMI, Fla., March 1 (Spl.).—The weighing-in before a heavyweight championship prize fight can be an amusing and, frequently, an illuminating preliminary to the main event, and a charming commentary on human nature. The simple ceremony of placing two big fellows on scales and reading off the number indicated by the dial or the balance has been turned into a long and complicated ritual in which the cameramen bicker and battle among themselves to set up their little black boxes and the politicians present eye one another jealously from the moment they enter the room and see the cameras set up, and maneuver carelessly but carefully into position so that at the first sign of an approaching fighter they have but to take a step and they are in the line of the fire with the proper smile all set and ready.

It is amazing how one small room can be made to hold as many people as seem to need to see the tonnage registered by two human fighting machines on the afternoon of an important contest. There will be 7 or 8 photographers, from 10 to 12 newspaper reporters, from 3 to 5 commissioners, a half dozen clerks, 2 or 3 doctors, the entire managerial board of each fighter and a half dozen friends of each, the promoter and his legal staff, 5 or 6 hangers-on, a couple of cops, and at least 3 men of mystery who just stand around and look and smile, showing gold teeth. Nobody knows who they are, or what they are doing there and nobody seems to care.

To this little group you can add a sprinkling of local politicians who have heard that pictures are to be taken and that said pictures are certain to appear in the newspapers; trainers and handlers, an old-time fighter who has been dragged in to shake hands with everybody, and you begin to get a picture of what is packed into a room not big enough to hold half that many.

You pick up the paper in the morning and see a casual picture of two near-naked fighters, one on the scales and one standing by, looking on. Then you will see a group of civilians standing in the background trying to look unconcerned as though they belong there.

You would be amused if you could see the bitter and jealous battles for these positions, watch the boys wheel and circle near the spot, observe the photographers battle to get the chiselers out of lens range, and see the posers sneak back time after time just to get their faces onto the little square of celluloid film.

Most of them are never identified. The photographer is satisfied if he gets the names of the doctors and the chief commissioner. The other names are unimportant. The camera chiselers do not seem to mind as long as they can snare that little bit of fame by appearing in the picture, and show their friends that they matter, that they are permitted around persons of relative importance.

Often a picture will come into the editor's office with a band of these silly-looking lop-ears jammed behind the fighters as tightly as they can pack. The editor turns the picture over and looks at the caption and then asks, 'Who the hell are those mugs in the background? Anybody know any of them?'" The pictures are examined by the office identification expert who says, "Don't know any of them." The editor flings the print over to a retoucher. "Paint 'em out," he commands. The retoucher turns a fine spray on them. One by one the faces of the picture chiselers vanish, buried beneath a blanket of neutral paint. The two fighters stand there alone, or flanked only by a couple of weighing-in officials.

The fighters come in smiling, easy and affable, but their managers look strained and pale and worried. It is such a curious business, any way, this phony enmity which nobody really feels. The challenger isn't sore at the champion. On the contrary, he has the tenderest feelings for him for giving him the chance. The champion does not hate the challenger. If he is a good challenger he is helping to make a lot of money for the champion.

But the managers are quick to suspicion. Sharp themselves, they are always looking for something to be put over on them. They know they must appear smart in the eyes of their associates and the reporters, so they slide around the room, through the crowd, whispering first to this one, then to that, talking out of the corners of their mouths, and leading various friends aside and holding long whispered conferences with them. None of them really amounts to anything. There is nothing to talk or whisper about. Everything is really cut and dried. But they have to do "something."

The fighters step on the scales in turn, and every neck in the room is craned as though the life of each neck-craner depended upon his seeing at once the figure on the dial. There is a general surge toward the scales, cries of "Open up there! Stand back! How can we make a picture? What does he weigh? Let the commissioner through! Stop pushing!" Somebody calls off the weight and the magic figure runs like wildfire around the room. The crowd breaks up into little knots and chews over the weight and the fighter like cows ruminating. Everybody really knew what the weights would be, but the official confirmation seems to surprise them all. The photographers start yelling again, the fighters square off and the chiselers rush and jostle for the coveted positions in the background.

Terps' Boxers Lose Two Men For Finale

May Be Forced to Frofeit to Penn State in Two Classes Tomorrow.

MARYLAND'S boxing team may have to go Lion hunting tomorrow in its battle with Penn State with a half-cocked fowling piece, for injuries and insufficient training have rendered two Old Liners hors de combat.

A bad gash over Lyman McAboy's left eye, that cost him the 155-pound Southern Conference championship, is expected to keep him out of the ring, and Jack Herbsleb, 165-pounder, abandoned training rules for a week and is not in condition. Unfortunately, Maryland is not overburdened with reserves in these particular divisions and it may have to forfeit.

All others on the teams are in fine fettle and anxious to have it out with State. Stew McCaw, conference 175-pound champion, and Al Farrell, finalist in the heavyweight class, appear to be Maryland's best bets. Others who are to defend the Terp honor are Bill Waller, 115 pounds; Harry Carroll, 125 pounds; Dick Babcock, 135 pounds, and Walter Webb, 145 pounds. All have lost once this season.

Maryland does not know which men it will be called on to face in this, the final bout of its schedule. State is noted for the potency of its boxers, however, and is certain to put a well-balanced team in the ring.

Intramural Finals Near at Virginia U.

Much Interest Is Shown in Various Games.

Charlottesville, Va., March 1 (Spl.).—Championship contests in the University of Virginia intramural games are just around the corner. Final eliminations are now being played in basket ball while the boxing and swimming titles will be decided next Monday and Tuesday nights.

So great has been the interest in the boxing tourney for fraternities that it has been decided to run off the final and consolation bouts next Tuesday night in the Memorial Gymnasium.

The interfraternity basket ball league has had so many teams entered that it has had to be run off in three sections. The first group has been won by Sigma Nu, the second by Pi Lambda Phi and the third is still in a four-way tie between Theta Tau, Theta Delta Chi, Alpha Chi Sigma and Alpha Mu Sigma. The winner of the fraternity trophy must play the leader of the nonfraternity section.

Finals of the swimming meet for fraternity men are set for next Tuesday night in the Memorial Gymnasium pool.

Title Is Kept By Carnera At Miami

Crowd Cheers Loughran, Boos Champion as Fighters Meet.

Carnera Goes Into Ring a 5-1 Favorite; Is 86 Pounds Heavier.

the champion would win by a knockout.

The referee was Leo Shea, the judges Roy Lathan and Colin "Red" McLachlan.

Loughran, calm and smiling, came into the ring first and the small crowd cheered him roundly. Carnera, scowling and tremendous in size compared to the challenger, received a chorus of boos as he trundled down the aisle and into the ring.

Intermittent showers through the evening had stopped as the warriors tied on their fighting gloves.

There was virtually no prefight sale at the ticket booths scattered around the stadium offering paste-boards at $2 to $20, and it was apparent the show would be lucky to have as many as 10,000 witnesses, barely one-fourth the arena's capacity, by the time the main event was called.

Despite the odds against him, Loughran prepared peacefully and with confidence for the greatest chance of his 15 years' ring career. He met the huge Carnera for the first time at the weighing-in ceremonies this afternoon and was not visibly impressed.

Fight by Rounds

on his feet. Carnera leaped on the challenger and tumbled him across the ring, heaving him from side to side, and the crowd booed as Loughran bobbed like a cork in a stormy sea. Carnera drove Tommy to the ropes, shot a left hook to the head, a heavy right to the body and another left to the body. Tommy danced away instead and stabbed Carnera's head with three left jabs, but the champion roared back at him, flinging him about in his huge arms and nailing him with a hard uppercut to the head as the bell sounded.

Round two—Loughran surprised the big boy dancing a left to the head and chopping a right to the body. Carnera stabbed Tommy's face neatly with a long left and Tommy, looking like a pigmy beside the tremendous bulk of the champion, stabbed him right back on the nose. Carnera jumped into close quarters and roughed Loughran along the ropes, but Tommy tied him up neatly as Carnera swung wildly with both hands. Carnera chased Tommy into a corner, whipped a left to the body and a right to the head, which shook the challenger badly. Holding Tommy with one hand Carnera drove the challenger across the ring and hurled him about roughly, failing to land the blow but bearing down with all his weight on Loughran's smaller form while the crowd howled in protest and the referee pulled the champion away angrily at the bell.

Round three—Loughran took the offensive, jabbing Carnera's nose three times with a light left. As Carnera seized the tiny challenger, started to hurl him about again the crowd howled again. The champ grinned and let Tommy loose. Loughran danced away lightly, pumping three lefts to the head and a right to the body, but Carnera chased after him, smothered him in his big arms and hurled him about on the ropes, clubbing lefts to the body, rights to the side of the head. As they feinted in the open, Carnera hit the challenger with a hard left hook to the head, but Tommy stopped short and belted the champ with a long straight right to the jaw. The crowd roared approval. Carnera fought back savagely, pounding on Tommy's arms with both his huge fists. Tommy pulled out of a dangerous spot in a corner to fling a left hook to the head and a right to the body as the round ended.

Round four—Dancing in swiftly, Tommy shot a left to the head and a right to the body. That angered the champion so he picked Tommy up and almost hurled him through the ropes on one side of the ring. The referee warned him again and Loughran danced swiftly in jamming Carnera's face with a short left, crossing his right full and hard to the jaw. Carnera missed a wild right in a return and Tommy wrapped the champion with left and flung another right to the head as Carnera started to flounder. Matching all his gulle against the tremendous strength of the champion Tommy stabbed in with lefts, feinted him out of position and banged him with both hands as the crowd went wild with applause. Tommy was making the champion miss and Carnera looked like a novice as Laughran speared him and outdanced him to the end of the round.

Round five—Carnera caught Tommy coming in with a left to the side of the face and roughed Tommy mercilessly along the ropes, holding him with one hand and with the other hitting him on the side of the head. He drove Tommy into a corner and the challenger made the giant miss with both hands. But Carnera leaned heavily on the little fellow and smashed him about the head with both hands. Carnera chased Tommy across the ring, caught him on the other ropes and did it all over again. Tommy bounced from side to side, totally unable to cope with the champ's strength. As Carnera batted him again in a corner Tommy suddenly stepped out with a left to the jaw that bent Carnera's knees. Again Tommy sent a right to the chin and Carnera seemed to stagger a trifle. Furiously Loughran smashed both hands to the body with a beautiful rally as the bell sounded.

Round six—Carnera rushed out anxiously and Tommy speared him with a left to the face that brought a lump under the champion's left eye. Loughran flew at the champ with both hands, smashing rights and lefts to the giant's face and Carnera was so frantic he grabbed Loughran about the face with one hand and hammered his head with a right until the referee forced him to stop. Failing at long range, Carnera grabbed Tommy again and forced him to the ropes, where he hammered wildly at Tommy's body, forcing him half way out of the ring. Tommy came away and banged another hard right to the jaw, but Carnera forced him to the ropes and hit him on the head with both hands. Loughran crashed a right to the heart and the crowd booed as Carnera hit him with a left as the referee broke them. Loughran banged a right to the body but blood trickled down his face from a cut on the left side of his head as the bell sounded.

Round seven—Moving swiftly, Tommy danced about the great hulk of the champion, trying to reach him with a left jab to the face, but Carnera stabbed out three times with his left to Tommy's jaw. Loughran shot a light left to the body and as the champion rushed in, tied up Carnera neatly. As they came away Loughran shot a terrific right to Carnera's jaw and the champion turned savage. He drove Loughran to the ropes, smashing his head with both hands, beating him as he would with two clubs and the challenger backed desperately, bobbed low and wove as much of the storm as he could. Carnera calmed down and Loughran danced dizzily to the center of the ring again. He managed to jab a left to Carnera's head and a left to the side as the bell sounded.

Round eight—Carnera tore out as if to end the fight swiftly, catching Loughran in midring, driving Loughran across to the ropes under a bat-like attack from both fists, Tommy staggered as he came off the ropes and his legs were dragging wearily. He shot his left to Primo's body and then landed a hard right to the chin as Carnera followed. Again as Tommy retreated and the champion tore after him, Loughran stabbed his left straight to the head and pounded his right on Carnera's jaw. They danced, each watching for an opening. Suddenly Carnera charged Loughran to the ropes, but Tommy stabbed him, pulled his way out of danger and stabbed the champion's nose weakly as the bell rang.

Round nine—Content to box with his lighter, cleverer challenger, Carnera stabbed Loughran's head with his left, then Tommy slipped inside and shot his own left to the champion's jaw. Carnera rushed Loughran to the ropes again, the one place where he continually held the upper hand, and bludgeoned Tommy about the head with hands. Loughran came out wearily and Carnera jabbed him heavily about the head with three long left handers. Again Carnera jabbed Loughran's face with a left, then crossed a right to the jaw as Tommy weakened and moved slowly in his efforts to get away. As they clinched the referee pulled them away and Loughran drove a hard right to the head. They were dancing, both tired, at the bell.

Round ten—Loughran bounced up freshly and stabbed for Carnera's long jaw with his left. They popped jabs at each other until Carnera again enveloped the challenger in his huge arms on the ropes and held him, clubbed him and heaved him around generally. Loughran tried to reach the champion's head with his left but he could only retreat to the opposite ropes when the champion again hung all over him. Once more Referee Shea hauled the champion off the little man angrily, and Carnera shouted back at him in Italian. The pace slowed as they were content to feint for right hand openings. Tommy shot a long right to the head, Carnera got one over. Loughran whipped a left hook to the body and Carnera missed with both hands. Rallying beautifully Tommy slugged with the champion and landed half dozen right hand smashes to the side as Carnera missed as many punches with both hands. Both went wearily to their corner at the bell.

Round eleven—Loughran adopted new tactics, bending low, stabbing half a dozen lefts in the corner and smashed the champ heavily on the head with three right-hand punches. Tommy staggered as the referee pulled them apart and he wearily lifted a left jab to the champion's head. Carnera measured him with a left, but landed high on the head and the champion followed in with a hard hook to the jaw. Tommy danced heavily away and Carnera caught him in another corner, pounding him on the head with a clubbing right. The champion sank a deep left hook into Tommy's body, forced him into a corner and banked to the head with both hands. Tommy managed to dance away, but he was weak and very tired as the bell sounded.

Round twelve. — Loughran danced about the center of the ring, striving to keep away from Carnera's rushes. The champion bulled after him, doggedly caught him in a corner and smashed him furiously about the head with both hands. As Tommy swayed before the onslaught, rain started falling heavily and the crowd sought shelter. Tired himself, Carnera pushed Tommy from one corner to another but the champion was clumsy and wild as he poured heavy punches lenger. Loughran sneaked over a left hook to the body and another left to the jaw but the champion staggered him with a left hook to the head. In desperation Tommy flung a long hight to the champion's jaw, but he was desperately weary and holding as the bell rang and the shower ended as suddenly as it had started.

Round thirteen—Making it as rough as he could, the champion thundered down on Tommy, driving him to the ropes for a two-handed cuffing. Tommy tore loose and as they stepped around the middle of the ring he landed three left jabs to the champion's head, but Carnera caught him again and bounced two rights off Tom's jaw and then caught him in a corner with a left hook to the head. The crowd booed again as the champ took every advantage of his great size and hammered Tommy roughly in a corner, slung like hammers, belted down on Tommy's head and shoulders and he could scarcely drag himself erect from the corner. He leaned wearily on the champ, took another hard left to the head and then manfully heaved his right into Carnera's side. Tommy was dancing unsteadily at the bell.

Round Fourteen.—Carnera galloped clumsily across the ring and heaved a left at Tommy head but missed 4 feet as the crowd laughed. They danced in mid ring swapping left jabs but when Loughran hurled a deep hook to the body, the champion smashed him with both hands. Loughran staggered backwards and Carnera followed him madly, shooting for a knock-out. Three heavy left jabs and a thumping right rocked the challenger. Desperately Tommy retreated, the left side of his face swelling and Carnera chased him to the ropes. A left and right to the head, a left to the body drove Tommy across-legged into a corner. Weakly the challenger swung two left hooks to the head but Carnera laughed as he drove him again to the ropes and belted Tommy's head with rights. Loughran was so dazed he went to Carnera's corner at the bell and in friendliness Carnera's seconds threw water on him.

Fifteenth rund—Loughran rallied desperately, jabbing a left to Carnera's body and a right to the head. The champ chased him to the ropes and dropped a hard right on Tommy's chin. As they danced in midring Loughran's defense was gone and Carnera stabbed him repeatedly with left jabs to the head. The crowd booed as Carnera pounded Tommy into another corner and never let up in his roughness. A left and right to the head and he reeled into a corner badly beaten as Carnera slugged his head with both hands. Carnera let up a bit and jabbed the challenger's head, but in a few seconds he tore back again with all his bulk, forcing Tommy against the ropes almost from the ring. Loughran reeled into a left jab and right cross to the jab, but he stabbed back gallantly. Carnera was beating him with both hands at the ball.

Sande Picks Cavalcade In Derby

Brookmeade Star Is His Choice if Given Pick of Derby Mounts.

NEW YORK, March 1 (U.P.).—Given the opportunity to ride in the sixtieth running of the Kentucky Derby, Earl Sande, the boy who had a habit of winning America's premier horse race until age and weight forced him to hang up his tack, would select the Brookmeade Stable's Cavalcade from the 124 nominations in the mile and a quarter classic at Churchill Downs May 5.

"Cavalcade is my preference among the Kentucky Derby candidates," Sande said when show a list of nominations at Belmont Park shortly after the entries were made public. "He impressed me last year as a youngster that might develop into a real good 3-year-old. I liked First Minstrel for the race, just bazing calculations on what I saw last year, of course, but I see his name does not appear as a candidate.

Cavalcade, a brown son of Lancegay, out of Hastily, finished sixth on the list of money-winning juveniles in 1933. Out of 11 starts the colt won 2 races, one of them the Hyde Park Stakes at Arlington Park. He was second and third three times. His earnings were $15,730.

Won in Illinois Race.

Making his first start at Belmont Park on May 27, Cavalcade quit through the stretch in a 4½-furlong allowance race and finished fourth. He was shipped to Illinois, where he emerged from the maiden ranks in the Hyde Park Stakes. In this race he beat Singing Wood, the Belmont Futurity winner, by the small margin of a neck. His victory was not quite as hollow as the charts of that race indicate.

After a poor start, in which he was far out of the running for five-sixteenths, the son of Lancegay crowded his way through a narrow opening entering the stretch of the 5½-furlong sprint, and was drawing clear at the end. Over a longer route his margin of victory would have been much greater, as he was going away crossing the wire.

Monel Leads From Start to Beat Pot Au Brooms by Two Lengths at Hialeah

Mare Scores, Foul Claim Refused

Finishes Mile in 1:38 on Slow Track and Returns $5.80.

Speedy Skippy Victor; Idle Victory Takes Juvenile Dash.

HIALEAH PARK, March 1 (AP).—S. W. Labrot's Monel, 5-year-old full sister to her more famous stablemate, Tred Avon, won her first purse of the current meeting when she led home three other members of the older division in the Sanford Purse of one-mile here today. The chestnut mare was well in hand as she passed the finish two lengths in the van. W. Sachsenmaier's Pot au Brooms was eight lengths in advance of W. S. Kilmer's Sun Apollo for the place, while the oft-touted Chatmoss was a laboring trailer.

Monel and Chatmoss shared most of the play, the winner paying $5.80, as second choice. She covered the distance in 1:38, a smart performance considering the slow condition of the track.

Claim Is Discontent.

Charlie Kurtsinger, who rode the second horse, loged a claim of foul against the winner but the stewards quickly confirmed the original result. Lester Balaski, New Orleans lad whose contract today was purchased from Bill Irvine of the Labrot establishment by George Phillips, piloted Money. Balaski swung his mount into instant command and, nursing her along on top, never was in real danger, the mare moving well clear in the stretch. Pot au Brooms was the chief contender nearly all the way.

Wayne Wright earned a double when he guided A. A. Baroni's Speedy Skippy to a handy victory in the Santa Rosa Purse, 7-furlong dash for 3-year-olds which shared the spotlight with the Sanford Purse. Speedy Skippy, the only starter which was not nominated for the Florida Derby, had a length to spare over L. M. Severson's Jens Son. The winner paid $9.80.

Royal Gold Scores.

The first race was full of paddock tips, one of the hottest of these, Royal Gold, made good under Charlie Kurtsinger's fine ride. It was a pretty finish, the first five horses reaching the wire almost on a line. Marcasite was second and Prize Package, the favorite, third. Royal Gold paid $10.30.

Idle Victory, a daughter of Victorian that has not been out of the money in any of her eight races, was a driving winner of the juvenile dash, paying $8.10. There was an element of luck on her side, for several horses suffered by the crowding just after the start, notably Ogle and Alaric. Ogle was a fast going second, a half length before Manual, while Alaric was fourth.

Scythe Wins Easily.

Scythe drew the bulk of the play in the third race and justified the play with an easy triumph over the six furlongs distance. Under Don Meade's hustling tactics, the gelded son of Sickle breezed home with two lengths advantage over Shuffle Off. The latter beat Superlette Lou, a fast-working newcomer, by a head for second money. Scythe returned $6.40.

Earl Porter decided it was about time to win a race when the sixth event rolled around, so the Illinois imp coasted to a six-length score astride the odds-on choice, Eurydice, which paid $3.80. Davoc chased the winner throughout without ever being able to make much of an impression, but he easily saved the place by three spans from Squeeze Out.

Earl Porter made it two straight in the seventh, Stone Martin winning by a length to pay $3.40. Spartan Lady beat Royal Durbar by three lengths for the place.

Only 12 Games Listed For Georgetown Nine

An abbreviated schedule of 12 games—shortest since the days when handle-bar mustaches were popular—will be played by Georgetown's baseball team, it was announced yesterday. Seven games are at home. Cancellation of their Southern trips by many Northern schools cut the schedule by several games.

The complete list follows:

May 4, West Virginia; 5, Mount St. Mary's, away; 8, Washington and Lee; 11, Temple, away; 12, Villanova, away; 18, William and Mary.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

For further proof address the author, inclosing a stamped envelope for reply. Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

The Witwatersrand of Africa is the most famous and richest gold mining district in the world. Its myriads of shafts and tunnels form an inverted city deep in the earth. The elevators, instead of taking you up flight after flight, drop you down 200 stories or more into the ground.

It was discovered by accident in 1886 and since then estimates of the gold value in the mines have been placed at $10,000,000,000. The Witwatersrand is about 70 miles across. Underneath it has been honeycombed by thousands of miles of shafts. Even streets and avenues have been dug into the workings.

Dr. Cole, of Montreal, made his freak birdie on the ninth hole of the Monterey Country Club course in Mexico City. His tee shot fell into a water trap, but a crow came along and picked the ball out of the water, then flew to the green where it dropped it. Dr. Cole sank his putt, scoring a birdie 2.

The goat in the above drawing was born with forelegs, but they were useless so she learned to walk in an upright position like a man. She is now 10 months old, and gets around with amazing agility.

Tomorrow—The six-way tie.

At the Post . . .

with Bill Bennings.

Hialeah Race Track, March 1.

Dear Al:

I believe I had the right day for Zembla, my longshot special in the last race. However, the mare was scratched and our chance of participating in an old-time Marlboro killing was thwarted. In fact, the following ruling was announced by the stewards: "J. Y. Christmas, the horses he owns and trains are suspended under rule, No. 328. The case is referred to the Florida Racing Commission." The horses are Zembla, Rough Party, Pardina and Nourrice, owned by Christmas, and Caterer and Wee Broom, which Christmas trains for C. B. Strum. Rule No. 328 deals with stimulants and narcotics. At that, Bennings, Inc., managed to scare home three winners. Merry Christmas and Happy Scot.

BILL.

First race—The King should win his or keep right on running for the glue factory. Not much of a price expected, but this looks like his race. Phanton Legion can better recent efforts and will be ready if the top fellow makes mistakes. Battling Knight failed me last out. Gets third call here.

Second race—Little Dinah has been recommended to me as a promising youngster. A daughter of Dinah Did Upset, which won consistently around Maryland. Burke will ride. Duncan's Leap and Gobet appear best of the others.

Third race—Happy Scot appears to have returned to good form and rates the top position over Quorum and In High. Wayne Wright will have the mount on the first named.

Fourth race—Ahmed had little chance to show his stuff in his debut, being virtually left at the post. Providing Saunders gets him away with the first flight tomorrow, I believe this one will scamper to the finish. Reconnoiter and Heiress for the rest.

Fifth race—Miney Myerson is still my baby. Goes after a field of tough ones tomorrow, but has done about everything asked hereabouts. Golden Fate and Gift of Roses to take care of the others.

Sixth race—Toytime gets in this with a mere 99 pounds. Balaski has been given the assignment and I see no reason to look further for the winner. Gilbert should do well with Lofty Lady. Fair Joan for the show end.

Seventh race—Claremont and Gibby's Choice appear to be the best of this group at 7 furlongs. Gracias is still my longshot special. This one is going to upset some good ones. This might be the spot.

Sweeney to Jersey City.

Columbus, Ohio, March 1 (U.P.).—First Baseman Bill Sweeney today was sent to the Jersey City Club under a one-day option by George M. Trautman, president of the Columbus Red Birds. Sweeney, who batted .302 with Toledo last year, was purchased by Columbus from Rochester two months ago.

Stocks Drop Two-Tenths in Lighter Sales

Favorites Change Little as Turnover Declines to 1,244,010 Shares.

New York, March 1 (AP).—Stocks stumbled occasionally today but caught themselves before going much lower and final prices for most favorites were little changed; the averages showed a small fractional loss.

With turnover down to 1,244,010 shares, notwithstanding a couple of brisk selling flurries, the absence of speculative enthusiasm was evident. Group movements were almost entirely lacking, though some of the metals backed up.

Amusement shares had a little following and a few specialties improved. The bond market drifted, nor did commodities exhibit much inclination to go anywhere in particular.

Stand on Money.

Secretary Mogenthau's remarks to the House Banking sub-committee conveyed to Congress word that the Administration did not desire any immediate change in the present monetary experiment. There have recently been rumors, chiefly abroad, that further dollar devaluation might be coming, but such reports have received little credence here.

External market influences were few and stock trading looked largely professional. Selling squalls lasted briefly, causing relatively minor concessions while they were in progress. Montgomery Ward, Chrysler, American Telephone and U. S. Steel yielded around a point at the worst, but later regained their losses.

U. S. Smelting cracked half a dozen points and closed 4½ lower. Snider Packing again firmed, while General Railway Signal, Paramount Certificates, Radio, Warner Bros. and General Motors improved mildly. Pathe Exchange "A" rose nearly 2. J. C. Penny was up 3 on its 1933 earnings statement.

Prices for February.

Dun's Index of wholesale commodity prices advanced in February for the eleventh successive month, though the gain was minute. The National City Bank's February review said "the influences causing the trade revival are still operating," pointing out that spring would bring new openings for business and that the money and credit situation was "more favorable for expansion than in a long time."

Excess reserves of Federal Reserve member banks have jumped to $1,100,000,000, while those of New York City members amount to $350,000,000; most of the gain has occurred here because of the heavy gold imports.

Gold shipments being received currently represent metal contracted for some time, transportation of which has had to wait cargo space. With the dollar at a level which make further imports unattractive, pressure against the Bank of France from American purchases relaxes. France has now balanced her budget, although the effects of deflation there will be closely watched.

Robey's Review

Finance Economics Business

Advantages of Governmental Foreign Trade Banks Rests Largely Upon a Continuation of Our Present Tariff and Money Policies.

By Ralph West Robey.

Quite clearly the organization of the three projected export banks by the Administration is a further example of driving the Government deeper and deeper into our business structure. At the same time it is well to recognize that there are various peculiarities in financing foreign trade at the moment that provide a fairly strong case for those urging this extension of Federal activities. To some extent these peculiarities simply are the result of earlier governmental policies. On the whole, however, I think this is somewhat less the case, at least so far as the policies of our Government alone are concerned, than in various other instances where it is being urged that the Administration step in and replace private business.

Under anything like stable economic conditions the supply of credit for foreign trade in this country would be quite adequate to take care of all needs. Our banks have done considerable work in building organizations for the purpose of financing such trade, and while they have not been as successful in this regard as some foreign banks, they are prepared to extend large sums. At present, nevertheless, the underlying conditions that are essential to liberal extension of such credit do not exist. Risks are too great—risks arising not from the activities and practices of the particular borrower concerned but from broad national policies over which the borrower has no control.

Restrictions on Trade and Capital the Most Important.

Most important of these are the restrictions that have been placed upon the movement of goods and capital. Because of these it no longer is a question of a lender simply analyzing the credit position of a borrower and making a loan or not according to the findings of such analysis. Now, rather, it is essential to consider, and perhaps give dominant weight to, Governmental policies on trade and capital. Through these a borrower of the best possible credit standing may become a bad risk.

What this means is that through the use of tariffs, embargoes, quotas, &c., in connection with trade, and moratoria in connection with capital movements, we have eliminated the free interplay of economic forces. Before a loan is made at present, accordingly, not only must the direct credit risk be considered, but in addition one must consider how repayment can be made—whether the necessary imports will be permitted to build up the balances essential to a liquidation of the credit.

In meeting this condition a Government bank will have great potential advantages over a private institution. This will come through its ability to assure that enough imports will be permitted to liquidate the credit. Obviously, this will not involve balancing each loan against particular imports, but the totals will have to be kept in harmony. It will be, in a sense, the coordinating of loan policies and bilateral trade agreements—a program of glorified barter, one might say.

Currency Uncertainty Also An Important Factor.

Perhaps only a little less important from the point of view of the risks that hinder private foreign lending is the uncertainty in the field of currency policy. Even domestically this still is having an influence on the loan and investment policies of private lenders. In the foreign field the effect is much greater. There still is far from complete reason for believing that monetary policies now being followed will not result in a currency warfare. As long as this possibility exists private lenders will be more or less hesitant in making large commitments in, or directly connected with, foreign currencies.

Whether these reasons are sufficient to justify the Federal Government going into the business of financing foreign trade, is, of course, another question. An alternative would be to overhaul our tariff, on the one hand, and remove the danger of a currency warfare—and the possibility of a depreciating dollar—by adopting a sound monetary and financial policy, on the other hand. Granting we refuse to make such modifications in our domestic program, however, it remains true that there are possible advantages to be attained through the organization of Government banks to finance foreign trade.

Bond Market Is Unchanged; At 83.9 Level

Trading Moves in Narrow Channels; Sales Drop to $11,599,000.

New York, March 1 (AP).—Bonds mulled about in a narrowly irregular range today and trading was the dullest since January 2 last.

Transfers approximated only $11,599,000, par value, against $13,970,000 yesterday. The average for 60 domestic corporate issues was unchanged at 83.9.

The market apparently was not influenced to any great extent by Secretary Morgenthau's statement that the Administration desired to hold to its present monetary plan, at least for the remainder of the present fiscal year.

NRA and Roosevelt.

Announcement that the President would address the NRA groups in Washington Monday was received with interest. It was expected that he would further clarify the recovery program.

Small improvement was shown by scattered United States Government securities. The volume here expanded to about $1,200,000. This section, like other prime investment groups, seemingly was marking time while awaiting publication of the Treasury's March 15 financing terms.

It was thought in some quarters there would be another $1,000,000,000 note offering, probably carrying a five-year maturity.

Most corporation loans were listless.

More Active Gainers.

The more active gainers included issues of Armour & Co., Santa Fe, Burlington, St. Paul, Colorado & Southern, Erie, Laclede Gas, Paramount, Northern Pacific, St. Joseph Lead, Union Pacific and Western Pacific.

American Water Works 5s lost 1¾ points in a relatively heavy turnover coincident with the formal offering of the company's new $15,000,000 refunding issue. Many loans were unchanged on the day.

Foreign obligations were quiet. Bonds of Australia, Cuba, Finland and Germany improved.

Wool Market.

Boston, March 1 (A.P.).—(U. S. Department of Agriculture.)—Scattered small lots on several grades of domestic wool sold at steady prices. A large percentage of the calls were on average French combing 64s and finer territory wools in original bags at 82@84 cents, scoured basis. In other greasy lines, the bulk of the demand was on 48s, 50s, ¼ blood at 69@71 cents, scoured basis, for strictly combing and average at 72@74 cents for strictly combing territory lines. Low ¼ blood 46s territory wool was sold this week at 62@65 cents, scoured basis.

Curb's Prices Become Mixed In Late Trading

Dealing Is Largely Inactive and Transfers Total 288,000 Shares.

New York, March 1 (AP).—Quotations were narrowly mixed at the finish of the curb market trading today. Trading was inactive except for a brief selling flurry in the second hour. Activity also quickened a little on a mild rally at the close.

Electric Bond & Share ended steady but American Gas & Electric and Columbia Gas & Electric preferred yielded a point each. Alcohols showed scant changes while among petroleum shares, Gulf Oil gained a point and Standard Oils of Indiana and Kentucky eased slightly.

With the exception of Bunker Hill & Sullivan, which slipped back 1¼, metals were generally steady. New Jersey zinc, Wright Hargreaves and Hollinger gold gained fractions. London—A confident undertone was maintained on the stock exchange today as business expanded. Industrials, gilt-edged securities and commodity shares were firm, while transatlantic issues held steady. Gold mining shares developed irregularity and foreign issues were dull. The market closed steady.

Paris—The violent drop in the price of Citroen shares from 360 to 285 and the continued heaviness of rentes induced a wave of selling on the bourse and prices declined, only Suez and South African gold mining shares showing strength. The closing was heavy.

Berlin—After a firm beginning, prices on the boerse met with realising which caused a weaker close.

Summary of Foreign Business.

Business activity is generally maintained in the United Kingdom, despite a seasonal rise in unemployment.

Netherland business in general continues to mark time, but better weather has favored outdoor activity, and the foreign trade, though smaller in volume, shows a better balance.

Austrian foreign trade for 1933 declined 15 per cent in imports and 4 per cent in exports from the preceding year, reducing the adverse balance considerably.

Yugoslav foreign trade for 11 months of 1933 yielded a larger favorable balance, with both imports and exports above those of the preceding year.

Egypt began the new year under considerably better conditions than a year ago, the improvement being ascribed chiefly to export expansion.

A smaller seasonal decline than normal is reported in Canadian January business.

Australian business still maintains a favorable trend, with the principal factors higher wool prices, good agricultural production, and heavy butter and egg export.

Seasonable dullness prevails in Japan, and business sentiment is not optimistic.

A slight favorable tendency has appeared in the Philippines, but the general outlook remains uncertain.

Wheat Values Drift Lower on Crop Estimate

Domestic Yield Placed at 450,000,000 Bushels; Corn Advances.

Chicago, March 1 (AP).—Jolted by unofficial estimates that 1934 production of domestic winter wheat would total 450,000,000 to 478,000,000 bushels, wheat prices went lower today.

March private crop reports issued today pointed to likelihood of such totals based on present conditions, and indicated an output more than 100,000,000 bushels in excess of the amount harvested last year.

The reports also gave considerable ground for belief that abandonment of winter wheat acreage in the United States this season would be only about normal.

Wheat Closes Unsettled.

Wheat closed unsettled, ⅜ to ⅝ under yesterday's finish; corn, unchanged to ¼ higher; oats, ⅛ to ¼ down, and provisions, varying from 2 cents decline to an equal advance.

A maximum fall of a cent a bushel took place in the wheat market. This tumble came in quick order, following the issuance of unofficial monthly crop summaries, and was also simultaneous with sudden stock market downturns.

One leading crop authority reported the condition of winter wheat as 77.8 per cent, an improvement of 3.5 over December 1 figures, against a decline of 5.4 in the corresponding period a year ago and in sharp contrast with the all-time low record of around 58 last year.

Estimates on Crop.

Crop figures regarding domestic winter wheat were not unanimously bearish, however, and rallies ensued from the day's extreme bottom prices. According to some unofficial estimates, the crop condition at present is 73.5 per cent, compared with the Government's December 1 estimate of 74.3.

Heavy rains today in domestic wheat territory southwest were a bearish factor early. On the other hand, cables told of less favorable conditions for winter wheat over large sections of Europe.

Corn and oats were relatively firmer than wheat. Shipping demand here for corn was excellent. March delivery of corn at Rotterdam today commanded 1⅜ cents premium over Rotterdam March delivery of wheat. Provisions averaged about steady, in line with the hog market.

Britain's Trade With Argentina Is Improving

British exporters strengthened their relative position in the Argentine market during 1933, according to a report from Vice Consul J. C. Pool, Buenos Aires, made public by the Commerce Department.

Official Argentine figures just issued show that Argentina's exports to Great Britain in the calendar year 1933 totaled 388,636,334 paper pesos, a decrease of 76,323,050 pesos compared with 1932. On the other hand, Aregntina's imports from Great Britain in 1933 reached a total of 208,269,001 paper pesos, an increase of 30,777,746 pesos over the preceding year. The favorable balance of trade to Argentina was thus reduced in 1933 by 107,100,696 paper pesos, or 38 per cent.

In 1933, the report shows, imports of British goods into Argentina accounted for 21.4 per cent of total Argentine trade against 20.4 per cent in 1932 and 20 per cent in 1931. The corresponding rates for imports of American products were, respectively, 12.7 per cent, 13.6 per cent and 15.8 per cent.

(One Aregntine paper peso equals approximately 32 cents, U. S. currency.)

Trade Trends.

(Associated Press.)

Scrap steel—Reports to the steel trade indicate that leading scrap markets are showing increased activity with the rising trend of finished steel output. At Pittsburgh and Chicago prices are reported 50 cents to $1 a ton higher.

Rayon—Despite adverse weather conditions Rayon yarn shipments during February were larger than in January, according to leading producers.

Drugs—Dealers in codliver oil report an active demand to build up low stocks in retailers' hands.

Hides—The spot market is lower, with sales made recently in Chicago at 9 cents a pound, off 1 cent from the previous level.

Flour—In the New York market consumers continue to buy sparingly for nearby needs. Price schedules show little change so far this week.

Cotton goods—Producers of combed cotton knit fabrics are supplying a good spring demand from manufacturers of women's underwear.

Machinery Industry in Germany Gains

Improvement Is Noted During 1933; Output Increases Also.

Germany's machinery industry registered definite improvement during 1933, according to a report to the Commerce Department from Assistant Trade Commissioner Roland Welch, Berlin.

The last quarter of the year ended with production better than for the last quarter of 1932 and, since official statistics show output each month during 1933 better than for the corresponding month of 1932, with but two exceptions, the 1933 monthly average undoubtedly will be better than that for the preceding year.

As in the case of so many German industries, machine manufacturers owe the 1933 improvement entirely to increased domestic sales. There was a slight improvement in export business during the last half of 1933, but each month foreign shipments were lower than during the corresponding month of 1932.

It is obvious, the report declares, that what the German machinery industry needs to enable it to regain its 1931 position is not only a continuation of the improvement in the domestic market, but a much greater export trade.

There are numerous indications, the report states, that the government intends to continue its efforts to keep domestic trade brisk, but there are few signs now that exports will show any material improvement in the near future. Nevertheless, the industry was able to show an expprt surplus during 1933 only about 29 per cent below that of 1932. The export surplus was maintained by a very close guard over imports, which were kept below the totals of 1932 and far below those of preceding years. There is every indication, the report states, that the government's restrictions against imports will continue and the German machinery industry should therefore be able to maintain an export surplus.

According to figures recently released by the government statistical bureau, German machinery exports during the ten months ended October, 1933, were valued at 461,223,000 reichsmarks, compared with 637,242,000 reichsmarks during the corresponding period of 1932. Imports of machinery during the two periods were, respectively, 34,066,000 reichsmarks and 39,285,000 reichsmarks.

Aluminum Cans for Food Now in Use

New York, March 1.—Food packed in aluminum cans, a new experience for the shopping housewife and a new departure for the food packing industry, is now available in the New York markets, according to the publication, Food Industries. "After four years of experimentation," this magazine reports, "in California and Pennsylvania laboratories, and a short excursion into a few representative markets, aluminum cans arrived in New York recently packed with tuna fish from Point Loma, Calif.

"Point Loma packers, cooperating with Aluminum Co. of America, made up their first batches of aluminum-packed tuna in 1929. Corresponding batches were put in tin, and in the succeeding years similar batches in tin and aluminum were packed every three months, and at varying intervals each batch was subjected to scientific comparisons of taste, color, odor, texture and purity. These tests bore out a consistent superiority on the part of the aluminum pack, it is reported. Consumer tests indicated that the housewife would pay a slight premium for the aluminum-packed tuna and a commercial pack of some 100,000 cans now enters the market.

"As packers' ware, aluminum has the advantage of being neutral," Food Industries declares, "eliminating the necessity of lacquer coating. Also, aluminum cans are easily opened, owing to the softness of the metal. Furthermore, aluminum, being light, saves four pounds for each case on the freight bill. A disadvantage, however, is a 15 per cent higher cost of the metal.

"These aluminum cans," Food Industries concludes, "are die-formed, and only the top is soldered on. When opened they have reuse value. Another feature is a 'grid' bottom that is said to prevent all the oil from being forced up the sides of the can and leaving the bottom dry."

Mexico Facing Mild One-Sided July Election

4 Likely to Run Against Gen. Cardenas, but Without Union.

Mexico City (AP).—As a result of the refusal of Luis Cabrera to participate in an election which he called a "travesty on democracy" the chances of opposition parties agreeing on a single candidate to oppose Gen. Lazaro Cardenas in the July presidential elections apparently have dwindled.

At least four men are expected to run against the standard bearer of the national revolutionary party, but political experts concede none of them a chance to do more than make a showing against the candidate of the powerful government organization.

Shy From Villarreal.

Cabrera, once minister of finance under President Calles, was sought as a candidate by the national anti-reelectionist party, but declined on the grounds that to accept would be "to lend myself to legalizing the government of imposition."

His followers refused to support the proposed candidacy of Gen. Antonio Villarreal, who is leader of the revolutionary confederation of independent parties, and an open split developed in opposition ranks.

Opposition leaders are still attempting to organize a convention of all factions to select a joint candidate, but growing disagreements among the groups make the possibility of a coalition seem unlikely.

Ask Exile to Return.

Villarreal has been asked to step aside in favor of Aurelio Manrique, fire-brand revolutionary figure, but is apparently determined to become a candidate, as is Manrique.

Despite his refusal of the first offer, the national democratic party is attempting to induce Gilberto Valenzuela to abandon his exile in El Paso and enter the elections.

In addition, two other opposition figures have announced their candidacies. They are Col. Adelberto Tejeda, ex-governor of Vera Cruz and leader of a militant agrarian organization, and Hernan Laborde, former deputy and radical leader, who is supported by the workers and peasants' bloc, a Communistic group.

Many Veterans Still in France

1,100 Americans Remain Abroad Because of French Wives.

Paris (AP).—Today, fifteen years after the bugles blew "cease firing," about 1,100 American veterans of the World War, still linger in France.

Most of them are "voluntary exiles" for the sake of French wives. The families average four.

Their numbers are dwindling, however, for in 1931 they were 1,700 strong, figures gathered by the American Legion Post show.

More than half live in Paris; the rest are spread over 49 departments. Last year some 200 veterans were sent home to America by the American Aid Society.

Information collected by the Legion shows that 5 per cent of the veterans live on their incomes; 10 per cent are in business for themselves; 10 per cent are professional men; 25 per cent work at trades, including farming, while 25 per cent are unskilled or without work.

The American Legion in France is devoting its efforts to making all A. E. F. veterans self-supporting or to send them back to America.

Commissioner Asks Dutch Navy Slash

Abolishing Famous Marine Corps Included.

The Hague (AP).—Drastic proposals for the reorganization and reduction of the Dutch navy have been made by a government commission.

The commission recommends that the personnel of the navy be reduced by half and the famous marine corps be dissolved; that of the three Dutch naval bases at Amsterdam, Flushing and Helder, only the last named be retained; and that all obsolete ships and war material be junked.

Dutch naval experts express great disappointment at these recommendations, especially the dissolution of the Corps de Marines, which was established in the seventeenth century by the famous Dutch Admiral de Ruyter.

Germany Punishes False Complaints

"Spite" Charges Against Officials Penalized.

Cologne (AP).—Because of a deluge of denunciations concerning the fitness of scores of public officials to hold office, a rigid investigation of all complaints has been ordered and the denunciators prosecuted if their charges were made through malice.

Many of the complaints were brought by women seeking to revenge themselves on men. Recently several divorced women were sentenced to terms of from six weeks to three months when their claims were found to have been based on spite motives.

The prosecutions are believed to have been ordered by Premier Hermann Goering. He was deluged by thousands of complaints, not all of which were well founded.

Einstein Bust Purchased.

London (AP).—Jacob Epstein's bust of Albert Einstein, made last summer in Norfolk, has been bought for the nation by the Chantery fund, established in 1841 to provide for purchase of "works of art of the highest merit that can be obtained."

Radio Waves and Ripples

THE newspapers' long drawn-out feud with radio ended yesterday without so much as a parting shot being fired by either side.

The boys shook hands and called it a draw. The newspapers went away agreeing to continue publishing radio programs. The radio minds went away with their news broadcasts, in a distinctly modified form.

Effective yesterday, all news broadcasting, except such purely local items as the newspapers themselves may wish to put on the air, will be limited to five minutes in the morning and five in the evening with the further understanding that the morning press association reports will not be put on the air earlier than 9:30 a. m. and day bulletins not before 9 p. m., local station time.

That and nothing more will be your daily allotment of news on the radio. As for the commentators—Boake Carter, Edwin C. Hill, George Holmes, Lowell Thomas, H. V. Kaltenborn, &c.—those boys will be expected to eliminate recital of spot news, and to confine themselves to generalizations of the news situation.

The news is being furnished the broadcasters by the Press Radio Bureau, a cooperative press association enterprise, with radio paying the bill.

WRC has picked 10:45 a. m. and 11:15 p. m. for its news radioing. WMAL's morning time remains to be selected. Its evening broadcast will be a five-minute prelude to the Postilion.

The Columbia News Service, envisioned not so long ago as a growing giant among news gatherers and dispensers, retains nothing but its name and five minutes at 11:15 each night as a Press Radio Bureau mouthpiece.

Whitecaps.

WRC—Love stories of opera heroines, 1 p. m.; "Here Am I" and "Sweet Adeline" sung by Jessica Dragonette, 8 p. m.; "Camera Fight," a three-act drama of the prize ring, 10 p. m.

WMAL—Music appreciation, the use of the overture and the works of Franz Liszt, 11 a. m. the relation of sports to art, R. Tait McKenzie, sculptor, 2:45 p. m.; George Gershwin playing "Nocturne," from Thomas Griselle's "Two American Sketches," 7:30 p. m.

WJSV—Ted Husing broadcasting from the six-day bicycle race in Madison Square Garden, 3 p. m.; assassination of Sandino and coronation of Henry Pu Yi. March of Time, 8:30 p. m.; "You're in My Power" and "Spin a Little Web of Dreams," Jack Whiting, 9:30 p. m.

Having spent all our life in a struggle for adroit facility with our native tongue, we were somewhat dismayed to learn from an N.B.C. press release today that one can, after all, inquire his way about a strange city, make love and carry on the business of daily living with no more than 300 words of English. Our professors took advantage of us in our eager youth.

To prove its point, National will present two dramatic sketches Monday, one employing the average vocabulary, the other saying exactly the same thing with a word list one-thirtieth the size of the first.

The Language Research Institute of New York University, which helped with the continuity, should be ashamed of itself.

Susan Mills' ideas on cooking are the sort you may adopt without unfortunate gastric consequences. She will broadcast some of her recipes with Martha Dalrymple's "A Woman's View of the News" as The Washington Post salutes the ladies on WJSV at 10 a. m. today.

The Library of Congress chamber music recitals, currently on N.B.C., will be switched to Columbia March 12. it will take C.B.S.'s Roses and Drums six Sundays to enact the two days in which Grant and Sheridan closed in on Richmond . . . Gertrude Berg, creator and chief actress in the Goldbergs, continues to turn down film offers, preferring to preserve her copyright for air usage . . . Harry Horlick is said to dispense Tokay wines and vodka to get his musicians in the mood for Hungarian and Russian compositions . . . Colonial Williamsburg, Inc., has written WMAL's Carlton Smith for a copy of the continuity he used in broadcasting the joint session of the Virginia Legislature in the renovated Williamsburg State house . . . it's to be put in the official archives.

1933 "8" Sedan with built-in trunk, finished in black and driven less than 10,000 miles. A model with Fisher no-draft ventilation, is so beautiful that the designers made few changes in 1934. Walt Mason, Himself

The Plowman.

The plowman homeward plods his weary way, if we believe the poet, Thomas Gray, and he no doubt is worthy of belief, since he was reared on British ale and beef. I've seen the plowman plod his homeward way, his legs were tired, his heart was blithe and gay, for he'd achieved a day of honest toil, and placed his trade-mark on the fertile soil. The day seemed long, but it was done at last, and now he hastened to a grand repast: large home-grown spuds and salt pork freshly fried, perhaps a squash, with onions on the side; great slabs of bread with butter from the churn, and beans and peas and cabbages to burn; he finished up with pies some three or four; he ate and ate till he could hold no more, then smoked his pipe before the kitchen fire till 9 o'clock, the season to retire. He slept all night without a nervous dream, and when at morn he heard the rooster scream, he left his couch and donned his sweat-stained duds, and ate ten pounds of fried salt pork and spuds. Well might the plute, the obese, stall-fed wight, exchange his wealth for such an appetite. Well might he give the roll that grows and grows, if that would buy the plowman's calm repose.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY George Takes It on the Chin By Harry J. Tuthill

MY STARS GEORGE, YOUR FACE IS SO RED. WHY DID YOU DO SO MUCH ARGUING WITH THOSE POLICEMEN INVESTIGATING THAT AFFAIR NEXTDOOR?
THEY COULDN'T UNDERSTAND WHY THE OTHER NEIGHBORS DIDN'T SEE OR HEAR SOME OF THAT DAGGER STUFF.
YES, USUALLY THESE NEIGHBORS KNOW IF EVEN A MOUSE SNEEZES IN THE BASEMENT.
ALL I GOT FOR EXPLAINING THINGS FIVE OR SIX TIMES WAS A HOT RAZZING FROM THE POLICE AND WISEHEIMER NEIGHBORS.
THOSE MEN FOUGHT SO QUIETLY.
THE PEOPLE NEXTDOOR WERE GONE. THERE WAS NO SIGN OF TROUBLE. THAT'S WHY THE SERGEANT SAID TO ME, ARE YOU A MERRY-GO-ROUND FAN, KID?
WELL GEORGE I'LL ADMIT THINGS DO SOUND FISHY, BUT THAT STRANGE WOMAN LEAVING THE BOY WITH US DURING THE TROUBLE PROVES....
ANYHOW I DECIDED NOT TO SAY ANYTHING ABOUT THE BOY UNTIL THE POLICE GET OVER THE NOTION THEY CAN SOLVE CRIMES BY KIDDING THE MAIN EYE-WITNESS.

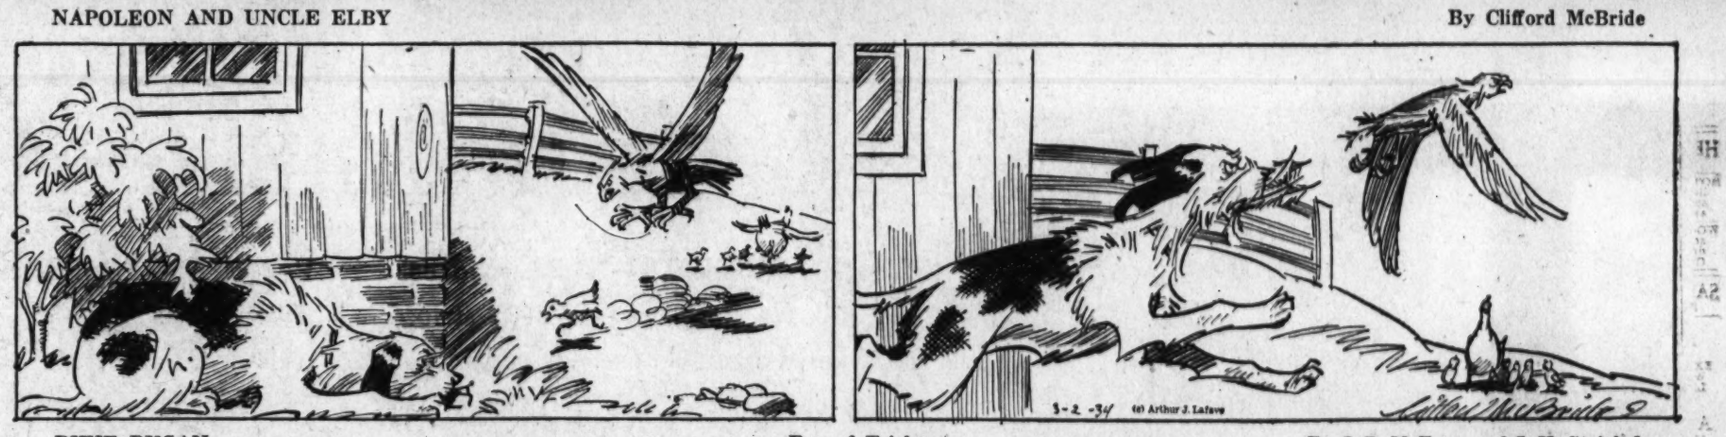
NAPOLEON AND UNCLE ELBY By Clifford McBride



DIXIE DUGAN Bag of Tricks By J. P. McEvoy and J. H. Striebel

EDGIE!-
HOW ARE YOU? HOW'S YOUR NOVEL COMING ON?
HELLO!— I'M BACK AGAIN!
OH-HELLO 'SCUSE ME EDGIE —
I THOUGHT IT OVER AN' DECIDED I MIGHT AS WELL LET YOU ORDER THOSE CLIPPERS FOR ME — OH— I THINK I'VE MET THAT GENTLEMAN SOMEWHERE

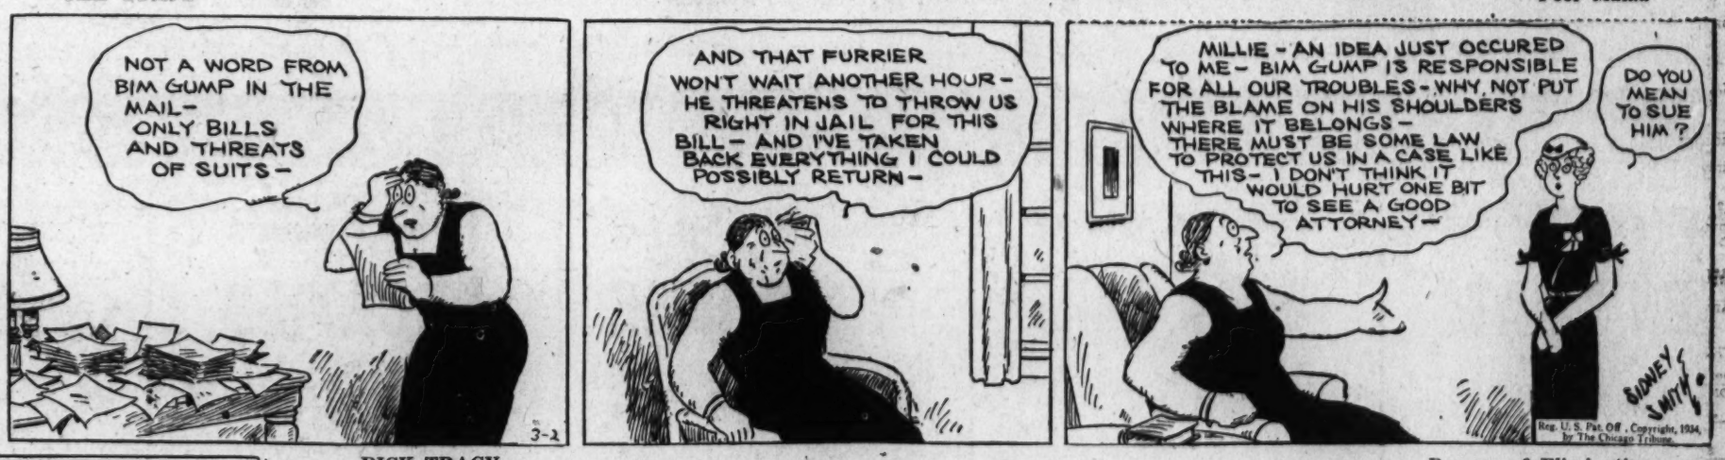
THE GUMPS Poor Mama



NOT A WORD FROM BIM GUMP IN THE MAIL— ONLY BILLS AND THREATS OF SUITS—
AND THAT FURRIER WON'T WAIT ANOTHER HOUR— HE THREATENS TO THROW US RIGHT IN JAIL FOR THIS BILL— AND I'VE TAKEN BACK EVERYTHING I COULD POSSIBLY RETURN—
MILLIE—AN IDEA JUST OCCURED TO ME— BIM GUMP IS RESPONSIBLE FOR ALL OUR TROUBLES—WHY, NOT PUT THE BLAME ON HIS SHOULDERS WHERE IT BELONGS— THERE MUST BE SOME LAW TO PROTECT US IN A CASE LIKE THIS— I DON'T THINK IT WOULD HURT ONE BIT TO SEE A GOOD ATTORNEY—
DO YOU MEAN TO SUE HIM?

DICK TRACY Process of Elimination

I'LL BE AS BRIEF AS POSSIBLE, MR. PENFIELD— BECAUSE I KNOW WHAT YOU'RE GOING THROUGH.
THANK YOU, DETECTIVE.
ANSWER ME THIS— WAS YOUR DAUGHTER, JEAN, CONTEMPLATING A TRIP TO QUEBEC, CANADA PRIOR TO THE TRAGEDY?
ABSOLUTELY NO!
I'M SURE OF THAT BECAUSE SHE AND I HAD JUST COMPLETED PLANS FOR A TRIP TO THE WEST COAST LEAVING NEXT WEEK.
THEY'LL PIN THE DEATH OF THIS PENFIELD DAME ON WHITE AND SPALDONI AS SURE AS FATE
HOW CAN THEY? THOSE BOYS SKIPPED THE COUNTRY A WEEK AGO. SPALDONI TOLD ME HE WAS GOING TO MEXICO—AND I DON'T KNOW WHERE WHITE WAS HEADED FOR.

WINNIE WINKLE, the Breadwinner A Startling Discovery

I CAN'T UNDERSTAND IT! TO THINK THAT AFTER ALL MY TROUBLE IN TRAILING THAT PROFESSIONAL CRACKSMAN AND RISKING MY LIFE TO GET HOLD OF THAT PAPER ONLY TO DISCOVER THAT THERE'S NOTHING WRITTEN ON IT !!
AND YET I'M POSITIVE I MADE NO MISTAKE !! THIS IS THE ONLY PAPER THAT PASSED BETWEEN "SOUP" MURRAY AND HIS PAL AT THE TABLE !!
I GUESS I'LL NEVER MAKE A SECRET SERVICE OPERATIVE! I'LL BURN UP THIS BLANK PAPER SO NO ONE WILL EVER KNOW WHAT A FOOL I'VE MADE OF MYSELF !!
WHY-WHY, THERE ARE WORDS WRITTEN ON THIS PAPER !! THE HEAT FROM THE FIRE SEEMS TO BE BRINGING OUT A HIDDEN MESSAGE !!
